

SILENCE SHROUDS OLD GLORY FATE

SECOND A. E. F. OFF TO ATTEND LEGION
MEETING IN FRANCE

Thousands Sailing From
New York For Paris
Convention

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Yanks are going. . . (this time) . . . going over there. . .
War time memories were revived today as thousands of world war veterans congregated in New York and set sail for France. The waterfront was thronged with them and the piers resounded to the music of bands and backslapping that betokened reunions.
It was a somewhat different get-away today from that of ten years ago. There was nothing mysterious or silent about this helms; no silent tramping through the streets with overseas packs; no stealing aboard darkened transports in the gray dawn of the morning.
Instead, the A. E. F. is going back to France and it wanted the whole world to know about it. It's going back this time de luxe, in the finest liners afloat, with linen sheets on the beds, and "chow" such as was never seen on the great trek of a decade ago. And there won't be any four hour watches for the black snouts of submarines on this trip.
The same old A. E. F., they are, though. A little thicker about the waist and a little grayer about the temples. But the same old razzing spirit was everywhere apparent. By the time the American Legion convention opens on Sept. 19 there will be some 15,000 of them in Paris and they will know it has visitors.

The first contingent to leave this morning consisted of 2,400 Pennsylvanians, who sailed on the Cunard liner Tuscania. Most of them were of the 28th and 79th divisions.
Besides the Tuscania and the Antonia, four other great liners were to depart during the day, the Scythia, Caronia, De Grasse and Caledonia. These six vessels alone will carry about 6,000 veterans. Three more liners will sail tomorrow carrying none but legionnaires and their folk, and on Saturday the flagship of the pilgrimage, the Leviathan, sails with headquarters and most of the staff of the A. E. F. among its passengers.
A dozen or so ships, all told, will sail during the next forty-eight hours carrying approximately 12,000 ex-soldiers from New York alone. And others have sailed or are sailing from other ports, from Norfolk to Boston.
A picturesque feature of the Antonia's sailing at 10 o'clock this morning was the presence of twenty-two Oklahoma Indians among the passengers. All were veterans of the A. E. F.

MARSHALL NAMED ON COMMITTEE PICKED TO DEFEND HIS BILL

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8.—Appointment by Governor Vic Donahey of committees to draft arguments for and against the Marshall bill, designed to provide legal compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace, was announced today. These arguments will be mailed by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown to Ohio voters in connection with the proposal of its defeat through a referendum vote at the statewide election next November.
The bill was passed at the last session of the Ohio legislature with a view to remedying the situation due to a U. S. Supreme Court ruling early this year that present Ohio statutes providing compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace are unconstitutional and void.
As members of the committee to prepare argument favoring the Marshall bill, the governor selected Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia, Republican, author of the bill; Senator Alton H. Elting, Orville, Wayne County, Democrat, and Attorney James A. White, Columbus, former superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League.
Donahey appointed as members of the committee to draft argument opposing the Marshall bill C. C. Jones, Columbus, president, Ohio State Automobile Association; M. B. Cain, Columbus, president Columbus Federation of Labor; Senator George N. P. Johnson, Youngstown, and Attorney Maxwell E. Wolganot, Cleveland.

RUBBER EXECUTIVE DIES.

AKRON, O., Sept. 8.—The body of Bertram G. Work, late president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company, will arrive here September 15 for burial. Mr. Work died at St. Moritz, Switzerland, August 30, following a short illness contracted during a pleasure trip.

TEMPLARS TO MEET.

AKRON, O., Sept. 8.—Arrangements were being completed here today for the annual Ohio commandery of Knights Templar convention, to be held here October 12 and 13. More than 10,000 delegates are expected to attend, and the convention will be the most elaborate held by the organization since the war.

CANADIAN PLANE IS NOW OVERDUE

SIR JOHN CARLING NOT SIGHTED SINCE LEAVING ON TRANS-OCEAN TRIP

English Become Anxious as Plane Fails to Appear—No Ships Reported Seeing Flyers—Plane Had No Radio

CROYDON AIRDROME, Eng., Sept. 8.—With the Old Glory disaster fresh in mind, anxiety began to rise this afternoon, as the hours slipped by and no word was received regarding the Canadian trans-Atlantic plane Sir John Carling.
At 3 o'clock the airdrome officials estimated that the plane was three hours overdue. It should have been sighted off the coast at noon, according to the schedule it was expected to maintain. The airplane carried no wireless.
Officials pointed out that no serious fears should yet be entertained as bad weather might have cut down the plane's speed.
A small crowd had gathered here by noon to welcome the plane.

By International News Service
With no radio to tell a waiting world of their progress, Captain Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf were believed far out over the Atlantic this morning, speeding toward London, England, in the monoplane Sir John Carling on an attempted flight from Newfoundland. The fliers, who took off from the airdrome of Old Orchard, N. F., at 7:25 p. m. Tuesday, were expected to arrive in England today, but the news might shake the confidence with which they started on the hazardous venture, slipped a brief pencil note inside the map case a few moments before the Sir John Carling's take-off, choosing this method of letting the fliers know that still another trans-Atlantic flight had apparently ended in disaster.
Tully and Medcalf hoped to arrive in London before noon today, and boasted before the start that they would take luncheon in the English capital.
By 5 o'clock this morning, they should have covered more than three-quarters of the distance across the Atlantic, and if all has gone well, the Sir John Carling should be sighted over the British coast before many hours have passed.
No word has come from any of the steamers which were expected to be in the plane's path, and the absence of a radio apparatus makes it impossible for the fliers to send word of the progress of their flight. However, on the theory that "no news is good news," the plane was believed to be heading speedily toward its goal, with the expanse of ocean between it and land steadily decreasing.
Light houses all along the British coast are keeping a sharp lookout for the plane, and London is at a high pitch of excitement in anticipation of the Sir John Carling's arrival.
The Sir John Carling is a Stinson-Detroit monoplane, powered by a Wright whirling motor, and is virtually the same as the Flier Detroit, the plane in which Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock are attempting a flight around the world. The maximum speed of the plane is 131 miles an hour and its cruising speed 116 miles hourly.
Tully and Medcalf both are fliers of long experience. Both served with distinction with the Canadian Royal Flying Corps, and are now members of the Provisional Flying Corps of Canada.
The flight is being made for a $25,000 prize.
The Sir John Carling's route is over the area where the monoplane St. Raphael, with Captain Leslie Hamilton, Lieut. Col. F. F. Minchin of the British Royal Air Force, and the Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim aboard, is believed to have crashed into the sea. The fliers planned to keep a sharp lookout for some trace of the St. Raphael which disappeared after it left Apavon, England, on an attempted flight to Ottawa, Canada.
Two ships were supposed to have been directly in the path of the Sir John Carling during the first 500 miles of its flight across the Atlantic. They were the S. S. Newfoundland and the Furness liner Nova Scotia. The Newfoundland arrived at St. John's N. F., last night, without having sighted the plane. No word has been heard from the Nova Scotia, which is believed to be participating in the search for Old Glory.

METHODISTS WILL APPROVE MARSHALL BILL AT DELAWARE

Action Expected After Senator From Xenia
Addresses Meet

DELAWARE, O., Sept. 8.—Approval of the Marshall bill which would legalize the collection of liquor fines by justices of the peace, was expected here today as Methodist ministers attending the tri-conference, gathered in Gray Chapel at Ohio Wesleyan University.
Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia, father of the bill, and Senator J. S. Edwards, Johnstown, were scheduled to speak at the morning session today after which a resolution in support of the Marshall bill will be introduced.
The next president of the United States will be a "dry," declared Charles F. Miller, superintendent of Indianapolis public schools last night in his address on education and law enforcement at the tri-conference dinner.
America is the most temperate of nations, Miller declared. The present disregard for law in this country, he said, is the result of lack of individual responsibility, indifference, sympathy with those accused of crime, tardiness in the punishment of criminals, such as has recently been demonstrated in Massachusetts, and the undue importance of technicalities in criminal jurisprudence.
Religious independence for China was advocated by Dr. Ralph E. Diederford, corresponding secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church here today at a joint meeting of the Ohio, West Ohio, and northeast Ohio M. E. conferences.
Christian colleges were defended from the charge that its graduates do not take leading parts in political reform movements, last night by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, Chicago.
"The day of the insurgent has arrived," Bishop Hughes declared. "He increases in the house and in the Senate. He now boldly declares that the people are more important than party."

BRITISH UNIONS BREAK WITH SOVIET

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 8.—By an overwhelming vote, the British trade union congress today confirmed the general councils decision to break off all trade union negotiations with Soviet Russia. Those supporting the confirmation represented 2,551,000 workers; the opponents represented 620,000 workers.
The council's decision said that "no useful purpose can be served by negotiating with the all-Russian councils of trade unions so long as the British government maintains its present attitude towards the Soviets."

TWO JOCKEYS HURT IN TRACK COLLISION

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Noble Walters and George Hughes, jockeys, were in a critical condition today from injuries sustained during a jam of horses, fighting for the rail position, in the sixth race at Washington Park last yesterday.
Walters suffered concussion of the brain and may die, it was said. Four other jockeys were unhorsed in the jam but received only minor injuries.
Pommard, favored to win, broke a leg. Five thousand spectators who witnessed the tragic pile-up, saw the valuable thoroughbred shot to death as a means of ending its suffering.
Fifteen Sixty, Jockey Hughes' mount, was knocked down in the collision of horses and dragged from the track dead.

THREE KILLED, FIFTEEN MAY DIE RESULT OF INTERURBAN CRASH

EVANSVILLE, IND., Sept. 8.—A check today on the disaster that befell patrons of the Dade Park race track near here late yesterday revealed that fifteen of the forty-six were in a serious condition and may die. Three persons were killed outright.
The tragedy occurred when a crowded interurban car, returning to Evansville after the races, ran into an open switch and crashed headon into three box cars loaded with brick.
Those killed instantly were: Chester Brown, motorman of the interurban car; William Tilley, farmer; Max Myers, of Evansville. The car, with every seat taken and aisles jammed to capacity, was speeding at forty-five miles an hour, when it hit the open siding. Only four of the passengers escaped unhurt, and of the injured, only three were able to go to their homes after first aid had been administered. All others were rushed to hospitals for treatment.
Coroner Max Lowe today began his probe of the tragedy.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID WHEELER AT COLUMBUS FUNERAL RITES

Dry Leaders Assist In Last Exercises For Anti-Saloon League Dictator—Governor Donahey Attends Service.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8.—Final tribute to his valiant fight in behalf of the prohibition cause was to be paid here today to Wayne B. Wheeler, whose body will be laid to final rest late today at Greenlawn Cemetery.
Wheeler's body lay in state at Central Methodist Church for several hours, while dozens of his friends and co-workers, including high officials of the Anti-Saloon League, in whose service he spent the greater part of his lifetime; the World League Against Alcoholism, and other temperance organizations, gathered for the funeral ceremony, scheduled for 2 p. m. Rev. A. G. Schatzmann, pastor of the church, was to deliver the funeral oration, and tributes also were to be paid by Rev. Walter A. Morgan, pastor of First Congregational Church, Chicago; Dr. Francis Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league; Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism; and Dr. Howard Hyde Russell, of the Anti-Saloon League.
A musical service at the graveside was to be rendered by the Columbus Republican Glee Club. Governor Donahey, of Ohio, Mayor Thomas of Columbus, ex-Governor Richard Yates of Illinois, Col. Patrick Henry Callahan, of Louisville, and a delegation of ministers from the three Methodist conferences in Ohio, now in joint session, were to attend the ceremonies. Wheeler's body will be buried at the side of that of his wife, who met death a month ago in a tragic accident at their summer home in Michigan.

CONVICTED MAN KILLED IN LEAP

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 8.—Clarence Hill, 29, is dead here today, from injuries sustained Wednesday when he jumped from the third floor of the courthouse after receiving a ten-year sentence for robbery. Judge Ritchie, who sentenced Hill, declared the act was committed before he had the opportunity of suspending the sentence.
Hill had pleaded guilty of robbing Theodore Fisch of $17, though he maintained he did not commit the crime.
Hill is survived by his widow and two small children.

SCHLEE AND BROCK LEAVE FOR BANGKOK

RANGOON, Burma, Sept. 8.—The Pride of Detroit, bearing Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock on a record-breaking airplane flight around the world, hopped off at 6 o'clock this morning for Bangkok, Siam.
Bangkok is 375 miles from Rangoon. Because of the comparatively short distance to Bangkok, Schlee and Brock said before leaving here that they might continue straight on to Hanoi, French Indo-China, if weather conditions were such they could safely fly on without making the expected stop. Hanoi is 625 miles from Bangkok.

KENT TRUSTEES WILL ANNOUNCE DECISION ON CHARGES LATER

KENT, O., Sept. 8.—After closing their fourth meeting for the hearing of complaints against Dr. David Anderson, president of Kent State Normal College, last night, trustees of the school said today that they would probably announce their decision next week.
More than 100 charges have been brought against the president of the school by faculty and alumni, who say he is too dictatorial and ask that he be dismissed. Dr. Anderson has thus far refused to comment on the situation, though intimating that he will make a statement after the trustees have given out their decision.
Many witnesses were questioned yesterday and John Clifton, state director of education, was present for part of the hearing. Considerable criticism has been directed against the trustees because of their refusal to make the investigation public.

ROME FLIGHT PLANE UNHEARD FROM SINCE FRANTIC HELP CALL

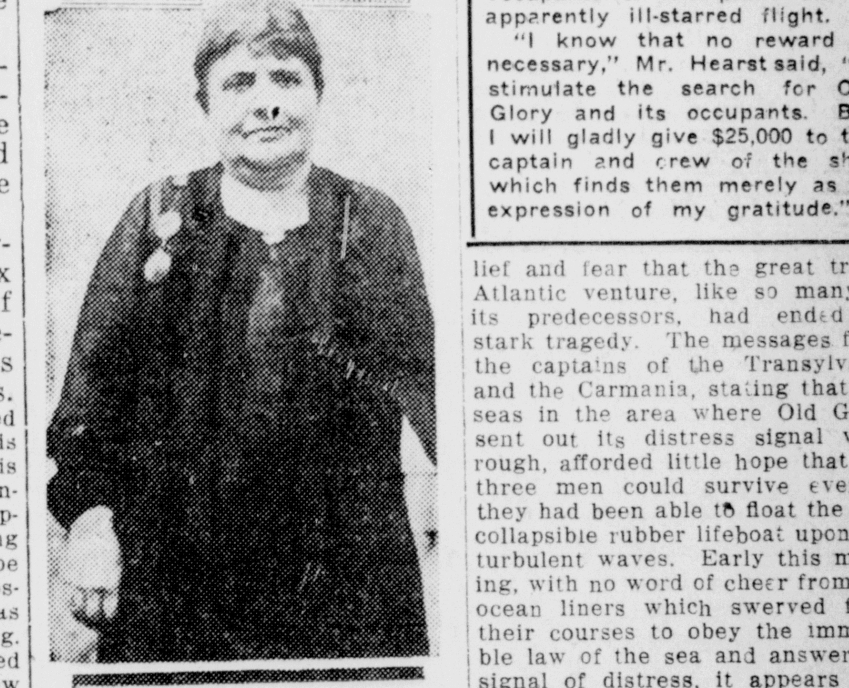

Two Liners Abandon Search Unable To Find Trace Of Monoplane Or Crew; Hope Still Held Out For Aviators

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The mysterious silence of the sea today shrouded the fate of the Fokker monoplane Old Glory, which is feared to have crashed into the Atlantic Ocean 500 miles east of Newfoundland.
No further word had been heard early today which might indicate what tragedy caused Lloyd Bertaud, James D. Hill and Philip A. Payne, pilot, navigator and passenger in Old Glory on its apparently ill-fated attempted flight to Rome, to startle the world early yesterday morning with a frantic S. O. S. call sent crackling through the ether from the plane's radio.
Two of the trans-Atlantic liners which rushed to the assistance of Old Glory when the distress signal was heard abandoned the search for the plane after a hunt of many hours. The vessels were the Transylvania and the Carmania, which were the first to reach the spot where the plane broadcast its message of distress before it is believed to have fallen into the sea.
"Area from which it is presumed airplane WRHP (call letters of Old Glory) sent S. O. S. has been searched by us without anything being found. Fear little hope survival in view of rough sea at time casualty," radioed the Transylvania.
Shortly after 10 a. m. another message came from the Transylvania, the captain of the S. S. Carmania radioed as follows: "22.20 (10:20 p. m.) G. M. T. latitude 49.15 north; 40.25 west, now nighttime and quite dark. Regret results. Weather conditions fresh westerly winds, quite squally and rough breaking seas. Proceeding great circle to Cape Race and then New York."

In spite of the futile search of the seas for the missing plane, there were many who still believed today that Bertaud, Hill and Payne are safe. And that the passage of a few hours may bring word that the daring venture has not ended so tragically as present reports indicate.
A number of explanations are offered for the belief that the fliers may still be alive.
First, it is believed possible that Old Glory met with some temporary trouble, and was forced to swoop down close to the surface of the ocean. As the plane neared the water, according to this belief, the first S. O. S. message was sent out. The trouble which threatened disaster then, perhaps, was repaired, and the airship again gained altitude, six minutes later sending out its message.
Secondly, the fact that six minutes elapsed between the two messages from the plane, indicated that the fliers may have had time to inflate their collapsible lifeboat and empty the plane's tanks of their gasoline. The fliers, according to this theory, may now be floating in the lifeboat or in the fuselage of Old Glory, with ration at hand which would keep them alive for thirty days.
But even these optimistic opinions could not veil the general belief that the fliers were dead.

TWO PROBABLY FATALLY HURT
IN EXPLOSIONS
Blame Mystery Blasts On Stills—Hospital Staff In Panic
CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Three persons were killed, two were probably fatally injured, and damage estimated at $200,000 was caused early today by two mystery explosions on the south side of Chicago.
Federal and city investigators, who began an immediate inquiry expressed the opinion that an alcohol feud may be responsible for the blasts.
All three explosions occurred within a radius of six blocks and within a period of forty-five minutes. It is believed the terrific detonations resulted from exploding stills.
Merina Marganti, 40, was killed to death in the wreckage of his home. Another man, killed in this same explosion, has not been identified. He and Marganti were trapped in the wreckage by falling walls. Joseph Bangora, said to be an alcohol racketeer, died in a hospital several hours after he was dragged from a wrecked building.
Serious consequences threatened at Mercy Hospital, only a few blocks away, when patients and nurses became panic stricken by the blasts. Physicians and nurses from other hospitals had to be called in to quiet the frightened patients.
A four story building on Wabash Avenue, said to have contained a still operated by Henry Finkelstein, an alleged lieutenant of Scarface Al Capone, was wrecked by the explosion of a 1,000-gallon alcohol tank. The building then went up in flames.

WOMAN A PILOT

Full-fledged pilot is Mrs. Mary Becker Greene of Alliance, O. She has sold her home and is living aboard her boat, plying on Ohio River.

CERTIFY SIGNERS FOR REFERENDUM

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8.—Election boards of twenty-two counties have certified to Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown that approximately 15,000 signatures of electors attached to petitions for a referendum at the November election on the Marshall bill are valid. It was announced today.
The remaining sixty-six counties, including all the larger ones in Ohio, have until September 12 to certify to the validity of not less than about 70,000 additional signatures in order to insure submission of the bill to a referendum this fall. The bill, passed at the last session of the Ohio legislature, is designed to provide a legal method of compensating village mayors and justices of the peace in liquor cases.
Today hope that the fliers are still alive was based upon the six minute hiatus that elapsed between the sending of the first S. O. S. and the supplementary message stating that the plane was five hours out of Newfoundland. These six minutes would have permitted the plane to be diverted of its heavy load of gasoline, while an emergency valve may have been opened which would immediately fill the plane's tanks with air. The flier would have had time to inflate the rubber life raft with compressed air carried in Old Glory's fuselage and set themselves adrift from the crippled plane in the event that a heavy sea threatened to shatter the structure of Old Glory.
"The plane also carried a collapsible radio set, with fifty feet antenna, and a 'radio kite' painted a brilliant scarlet. The radio had a sending radius of fifty miles and the kite, which was brought along to be strung above the radio if trouble occurred, would be visible for many miles on a clear day. Flares, calcium lights and very pistols and rockets were also taken so the fliers might send night signals if trouble occurred."

THEATERS SOLD

NEWARK, O., Sept. 8.—C. E. Hayward, Marietta, and partners in the Midland Theaters Corporation, have bought the Auditorium and Alhambra theaters here. It was reported today, a third theater is to be erected here by the corporation, it is reported.

NOVEMBER ELECTION BRINGS OUT 107 CANDIDATES FOR OFFICES

Factional political rivalry in Bath Twp., including Osborn and Fairfield, for village and township offices at the November election, is indicated in petitions on file with R. E. Dunkel, clerk of the board of elections.

A keen fight is in prospect particularly in Osborn village. So far two candidates have filed for mayor, one for clerk, two for village treasurer, twelve for council, three for the Board of Public Affairs and one for assessor.

Harry E. Frahn, seeking re-election, and George Bevil are the rival candidates for mayor. S. S. Schauer is a candidate for clerk and Mrs. Ella Moore and Henry Fisher are both seeking to be treasurer.

F. C. Massey, Paul Carlisle, W. T. Groner, F. W. Hamm, F. A. Kennedy and Charles Hoke, have filed for council on one slate. George Troutman, George W. Daffern and Robert C. Haerz composed a second group seeking council seats, and Waldo Zeller and Ralph Teach are running for council as a third group.

Harry Dellinger, Charles Semler and Harvey Miller have filed their intention of becoming candidates for Osborn's Board of Public Affairs. C. W. Turner is the lone candidate for village assessor.

A four-cornered fight for the position of constable of Bath Twp., is indicated. William Humes, H. Glen Shepard and William H. Schneider are the latest candidates to file. Charles T. Mellon filed some time ago, and with Humes, is also a candidate for Fairfield village marshal. Schneider and Shepard also filed the additional office of marshal of Osborn. Theodore P. Longnecker, Bath Twp., justice of the peace, has filed for re-election.

Five candidates are now in the race for Bath Twp. trustee vacancies as the names of Clarence E. Storck and Fred Shellabarger have been added to the list. Clarence D. Kennedy, Charles V. Mittman and Ralph Kyle are the other candidates in the field.

Number of candidates seeking places on the Bath Twp. Board of Education mounted to seven with the filing of the petition of L. H. Hartley.

Fairfield village is also having something of a factional fight for

MORE POWER

This is the time of year when many of young men and boys are considering very seriously what their school work is going to prepare them for. Many are ready to enter high school or college, or are looking toward another year's work in school, without having made a decision as to their life work.

There is not necessarily anything disastrous for a student in the circumstance that he has not selected his field of labor. Generally speaking, the student in high ought to be looking ahead to some definite life work in which he takes a keen interest.

If a boy of high school age has a marked liking for mathematics and mechanics, he should be encouraged to look toward a career in engineering.

Much of the great work of the world, particularly in North and South America, is going to be done by the next three or four generations of engineers.

Railroads are not going out of date for another two hundred years, despite the growth of aerial transportation in the immediate future. There will be more railroads to construct, and many tunnels and bridges will be needed to make long routes short and to reduce expensive grades.

But the production and distribution of electric power is the obvious and immediate job ahead of the engineers of the world.

We have only begun to use electricity intelligently and in quantities.

We have only scratched the surface of our power resources.

BENEFIT FROM NATIONAL PARKS

President Coolidge and his party had a most enjoyable week of sight-seeing in the Yellowstone National park, and all who have visited that famous resort will congratulate them on this opportunity. The action of the government in setting aside such wonderful tracts of wild land has been one of the most far-sighted things it ever did.

There is something inspiring and elevating about fine scenery. It helps visitors to forget their little worries and troubles, and they return physically and mentally benefited. It is to be hoped that as time goes on and the nation increases in wealth, the national park system will be greatly extended, so as to include areas of fine natural beauty all over the country, so that all Americans can visit these picturesque locations without long journeys or too great expense.

The Way of the World

TIME ENOUGH

"I haven't time," is the commonest of all excuses. In nine cases out of ten it means: "I haven't the ability or I haven't the interest." As a rule "I haven't time" is a dishonest expression.

GO TO COLLEGE

These are days when many young men and women are still undecided about going to college. There are some who ought not to go to college because they are needed too greatly at home or elsewhere. There are some others who are not fitted for taking on a college education. But in the great majority of cases in which there is doubt, the answer is, GO. College education may or may not equip you to earn more money, but it will give you unpurchasable satisfactions.

MONEY IN EDUCATION

Speaking of the money end of education, it is interesting to note that the average yearly earnings of Princeton students who have been out of college ten years is $7,500. For those who are interested in income that is worth thinking about.

TAKING THE BLOWS

When Ignatius, old bishop of Antioch, was on his way to Rome to suffer martyrdom, he sent this message to a young man who was his friend:

Any blacksmith can tell you the anvils will wear out hammers. If you can stand like a beaten anvil, nothing can prevail against you.

BETTER THAN PROSPERITY

We all smile happily when some financial expert predicts the United States will have a hundred years of prosperity. That may not be good news over the long run of time. Big men are not produced in soft times. The manufacturer of character demands hardship as one of its chief ingredients.

SOMEbody SUFFERED

Four hundred years ago Tyndale translated the Bible. Later he was strangled and then burned in Belgium. They thought he was a dangerous man. He was a liberal. Perhaps they called him a radical. That was in 1536. Many of today's prized possessions came to us through the suffering and death of forgotten heroes.

Songs of a Housewife

BY MARJORIE K. RAWLINGS

WORK AND THE WEATHER

I LIKE tasks better if they suit the day—
I work to the weather should adapt itself.
When hours hang heavy and the sky is gray,
I really like to clean a pantry shelf!

When winds are blowing through the shrubs and trees,
Hurrying home the tardy lady-bugs,
And all the world seems flapping in the breeze,
I like to join right in and shake my rugs!

I like to do my mending when the rain
Hushes the world and quiets passing feet.
It's restful, then, to darn a counterpane,
To sit and think, and make my patching neat.

And when white clouds lie idle in the sky,
The hot sun's drowsy and the fat bees shirk,
Passing the hard-to-enter posies by—
It seems plain foolish to do any work!

Say! Isn't It About Time Somebody Got Out and Walked?

Household Hints

By Mrs. Mary Morton

MENU HINT

Round steak has a delicious flavor, and if you get a tender piece (the top round) it may be broiled in place of sirloin or porterhouse, making an economical dish. Round steak that is not tender enough to be broiled may be chopped and then broiled or fried. The potatoes in the following menu are baked in the oven, which is also used to sear the tomatoes and broil the meat.

Broiled Round Steak
Baked Potatoes
Scalloped Tomatoes
Cucumber and Onions Sliced with French Dressing
Bread Pudding Tea or Coffee

TODAY'S RECIPES

Scalloped Tomatoes—Twelve medium sized tomatoes sliced, two cups buttered bread crumbs, one teaspoon salt, one-half to one tablespoon sugar, dash of pepper. Cover, bake in moderate oven twenty minutes, uncover, bake twenty minutes longer to brown. If you use cooked tomatoes, thirty minutes altogether is all that is needed for cooking.

Bread Pudding—One pint stale bread crumbs, one quart milk, one cup sugar, three eggs, piece of butter the size of an egg. Mix butter and sugar together, add the yolks of the eggs, put them into the milk and bread and bake half an hour. Beat whites to a stiff froth, add half a cup of powdered sugar. First spread layer of jelly on pudding, then the beaten whites, and return to oven to brown.

Condition—Sauce, spices, relish etc., used to give flavor to foods.

SUGGESTIONS

Dressmaking Hint.
Finish the neck of the frock you are making as soon as possible as it may get stretched out of shape with frequent tryings-on, and then it will be difficult to give it a neat finish.

ICE BOX CAKE

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)
The ice box cake may be a comparatively simple dessert or it may be a very rich one. The following recipe is of the latter order. Twenty-four lady fingers, two squares of chocolate, one-half cup granulated sugar, one-fourth cup water, one cup butter, two and one-fourth cups confectioners' sugar, one cup whipped cream, one-half teaspoon milk, four eggs, beaten separately. Line bottom and sides of tin plate with lady fingers, separated, rounded side down and close together. Cook chocolate, granulated sugar and water in double boiler until melted and smooth. Beat egg yolks, add milk, then add gradually to the chocolate and cook until smooth. Cool. Cream butter and two cups of the confectioners' sugar well. Add egg mixture, stir well. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Pour filling into form of lady fingers, cover with the rest of the fingers. Set in ice box twenty-four hours. Remove to plate. Cover with whipped cream, adding the rest of the confectioners' sugar and vanilla flavoring. A sheet of sponge cake may be used in place of lady fingers.

THE TROUBLE WITH PARENTS

With the possible exception of the average lover, determined to conceal his true nature, I suppose the worst fourthers in the world are parents. We pose as having erudition, omniscience, an unblemished record of obedience to parents and scholastic achievements. Sooner or later every child may learn the truth about his father and then—bingo!—down goes his idol.

The trouble with parents is their consuming vanity. Marriage itself and family life originally grew out of snobbery. It occurred to the chief of the tribe that since they were better than anybody else, the only way to have fit associates would be to surround themselves with their own flesh and blood. Hence the beginning of interest in one's own personal children. Today most parents might prefer to have their children a little more disposed to take them seriously. The ideal child would be one that thoroughly subjugates his personal desires and always does exactly as bidden, thus flatteringly accepting his parents' wishes as superior to his own.

He should also from time to time, make plain to his parents, particularly his father: "How perfectly wonderful you are! And how nobly generous! Think of all the food, and clothing, and shelter, and wisdom, you are constantly bestowing upon me. How can I ever thank you enough?"

But children not having known any other world, take this one as a matter of course and see no reason to be thankful for the privilege of existing, or for other routine favors. They are cursed by primal instincts, and dislike to admit inferiority, even to their parents. Hence they are reluctant to say, "Thank you," because that is a confession of indebtedness. No child, or other savage, ever formally expresses gratitude until he has been taught, or compelled, to do so.

Children must suffer much because of parental vanity.

One also hears parents congratulating themselves on never whipping a child while in anger, but I can't imagine anything more brutal than whipping a helpless little boy when not in anger. If a man is wrought up and not exactly himself, there may be a measure of excuse for his doing something foolish that he will later regret. But in his calmer moments, when in the best of humor towards his child, to go and get a cat-o-nine-tails and deliberately inflict physical pain—what could be more cruel?

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BEAUTY TIME FOR THE WOMAN WHO TRAVELS.

If you lead the life of a traveler, your beauty problems are legion, and to you especially I want to give helpful advice on how to sandwich in your time for beauty.

I spoke yesterday of the woman who has plenty of leisure time in her own home for her beauty rites, but your problems are far different from hers. She can take her time when she wants it, but you will have to catch your minutes on the fly, put up with varied and ever changing conditions, combat the deleterious effects of different climates and all kinds of vagaries.

You will be limited in your choice of a beauty kit, for placing preparations and implements on top of a dressing table is vastly different from packing them into suitcases or a wardrobe trunk. You will not want to carry any more than necessary with you. You will not have the advantage of the home woman in being able to make use of "home-brewed" beauty aids.

Most important of all, you must look well-groomed while you are traveling and spending time in hotels. You will be constantly meeting new people, and whether from a personal or a business standpoint, you will want their impression of you to be favorable.

In order to travel light, I advise that you use a face cream that will cleanse, revitalize and give a smooth surface to the skin all at the same time. You will be especially pleased with a cream made by a pasteurized process as it is so definitely beneficial to the skin it cleanses. You should use a skin-tightening lotion that will serve at the same time as a foundation. I know of one that is an essential job for travel because it can be used as a quick daytime cleanser to remove the stale make-up and put the skin in condition for fresh powder and rouge. Unless your skin is oily, it is my advice that you refrain from washing it during your travels and rely on cream or liquid cleansers in order not to subject it to the constant change in water. Do not place your tender skin at the mercy of hotel and train soaps. You will never regret tucking into your suitcase a small container of a good washing preparation, to be used on your face if you like, and surely on your hands, neck and arms. I like the refreshing, stimulating effect of beauty grains, or to counteract the effects of the dust and grime, a blackhead and open pore paste to go deep into the pores and purge them of all the impurities. For your make-up kit, you will probably find it much more convenient to use compacts than a loose powder. It is advisable to have more than one container of your favorite rouge and lipstick, as they have a habit of getting mislaid and one cannot always find what one wants in a strange city.

The great beauty drawback to traveling is the "messiness" of it—the lack of regular routine and home feeling. Constant moving and changing conditions are not conducive to the beauty habit, for which reason you must be particularly careful to think about beauty and to force yourself to do the things you know are necessary. Make your bath count for beauty, for that is one time when a traveler does feel like being luxurious and relaxed. You can use your beautifying washes in the bath and can even keep your face cream on them. When you throw yourself down on the bed for a few minutes before dinner, use your creams or do some beautifying exercises.

I hope my advice on beauty time for the traveler will make your trips more enjoyed and successful. In my next talk I am going to discuss the woman in business, who is really the one who "cashes in on the time she invests in beauty."

Mayor W. F. Brennan has received a letter from Mayor A. R. Turnbull, Canton, inviting citizens of Xenia to attend the dedication of the McKinley monument, September 30.

Because an angry baby held its breath until it was about black in the face, residents of Second St. for several blocks, were stirred to an unusual degree of excitement.

William H. Golden, who has been seriously ill at his home on Chestnut St. for the last three weeks, is complaining slowly.

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Do not forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.—Lulu Hunt Peters.

ANSWERS TO MOTHERS.

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers.

My sixteen-year-old daughter has been much over weight. When I called her attention to your reducing articles, she decided to try them. Result: She reduced 20 pounds, and is really very much prettier and her poise is much improved. She had to discontinue owing to a cold which she could not seem to break, while she was on her reducing diet. She's going to start again. She is so happy in her improved appearance, and has not felt ill or uncomfortable at any time. Your articles came at such an opportune time, just when they were really needed by her, and we are both profoundly grateful.

No many mothers realize sufficiently that overweight (to the stage of looking fat) in a child, is a serious thing, not only physically, but mentally, especially at adolescence, when the mind is so very impressionable and slight and unpopularity with the opposite sex make the youngster so unhappy. While it is desirable for children to be slightly above the average for best health, certainly when they are so much above the average that they are frankly fat, they should reduce. Children as well as adults may be precipitated into diabetes by overweight, and they are also less resistant to certain infections such as pneumonia. I have demonstrated myself—and many of the followers have had the same experience—that a cold does not clear up while on a reducing diet; so my advice always is to go back to maintenance diet during an infection. This diet, entirely the faddists' contention that starvation diets and fasting are remedies for everything.

Naturally, it is highly important that the growth foods and the foods necessary for proper functioning are not limited in youth beyond what they should be in the normal. As the increase in height will take care of a certain amount of weight, a reduction of one pound a week may be enough for children. At least two glasses of whole milk, at least one tablespoonful of butter or cod liver oil, fairly liberal amounts of eggs, cheese or flesh foods, and liberal amounts of vegetables, especially the green leaf vegetables, and fruits, must be taken daily.

We have a list of books for mothers which contain the names of some of the feedings of children. (Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for material.) Thank you for letting us know of your daughter's good results, H.

Sterility.

"I desire children very much. My general health is good, my weight is normal, but I have no eggs on the right ovary. May this be the cause in my case? I have been married for eight years."

MRS. M.
There are many causes of sterility, Mrs. M., and it is possible that the cyst you have may be the cause in your case, even though the other ovary might be functioning properly. Among the causes for sterility are unbalanced diet, overweight, tumors or inflammations obstructing the passages, and malpositions and malformations of the organs. In 25 per cent or more of the cases, the cause of sterility is on the husband's side, so he should also have an examination.

Some malpositions of the organs may be corrected by proper exercises. The exercises we have outlined in the Atonic Abdominal Wall are good. Include with those the exercise of walking on the hands and feet (especially good for backward displaced organs). Sometimes, in these wrong positions, the use of a little instrument (necessary) to hold the uterus in place is used. This has to be especially fitted by your doctor. Put yourself in the hands of a competent physician, Mrs. M.

Meanwhile, send for our articles on the Balanced Diet and the Atonic Abdominal Wall. Enclose a large self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Tomorrow: Answers to correspondents.

I Have Said in My Heart

BY IDAH MCGLOONE GIBSON.

MOODS.

Two letters have come to me so opposite in their ideas of what constitutes happiness that I am sure that other young women will agree with one or the other of them.

One said she was so tired of being a stenographer that she was going to accept the first proposal of marriage that came to her. "I want someone to take care of me," she said. "I want someone to pay the rent. I want someone to buy the food, I want someone to pay the bills."

"He may be old or young, ugly or handsome; indeed he need have only one qualification—he must have money or at least a smashing good salary."

"If such a man comes along, I will bid goodbye to Mr. Remington and Mr. Underwood without a qualm."

"I want to be one of those young women who can wear silk stockings without worry when they develop 'runs.' I want to order at a restaurant without looking at the bill and above all else, I want to have time and money to visit beauty shops when I please. Almost all writers of advice to girls say money cannot make you happier. Well, I would like some man to prove it to me."

The other letter is from a girl who has been married only six months. Being a wife is no cinch.

Memo:—Don't jump into matrimony. Being a wife is no cinch.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

THE OTHER WOMAN

That other woman! Doesn't she cause trouble to "us girls" from the cradle to the grave? She vamps our boy friends and makes them turn from their allegiance even in school days, and she does not stop even when boy friend turns into friend husband. Even her feminine friends are not safe from her wiles. What are we going to do about her?

A very young sufferer from her devastating wiles writes as follows: "Dear Mrs. Lee: There has been an awful nice boy coming to see me for about two months, but here comes the problem. I am bound with a nice girl of 14. I am 16 years old. This girl friend has a sister one year older than myself. I got her and my friend acquainted with the boy that was coming to see me. This sister is what I call 'good for nothing' or 'flirty.' She always seems to have the right amount of rags and lipstick on and the right giggle laugh to draw the boys' attention. Now, Mrs. Lee, she is trying to take my boy away from me. She is always talking with him or going out riding. I know that my boy doesn't care for her, but she just draws him closer to her all the time. She has some with about 50 different fellows and I think she ought to leave mine alone. I don't want to cause trouble by telling her to quit."

I haven't her name or address, but she may see your letter and appreciate it.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Soon, say the real estate experts, it will be impossible for the impecunious to live in New York's Bohemia, the fabulous Greenwich Village. The name of the place will stick to it, doubtless, more as a geographical designation than as a tempting come-on for sightseers greedy for a glimpse of our Latin Quarter. But since seven millions of dollars have been lately spent in making an industrial center of Varick St., a long traverse which serves the Village as a whilom boundary, the Village looms large in real estate estimate, and so it may not be patronized much longer by the poor in purse.

Of course, old timers will tell you even now, that the Village is not what it was ten or twenty years back, a cradle of the arts and of spontaneous living. They point out that the cafes and speak-easies are mostly filled with manicures, milliners and midnights; that if all the poets are not dead, at least they have moved to Connecticut.

Be that as it may be, this Bohemian center has provided a gaudy refuge for many an uptowner who discovered that his Riverside Drive family no longer understood him. The passing of the place as such a refuge will be felt, according to my friend, the psychiatrist, by all the misfits, the actual psychopathic cases, who have taken their many phobias down Bleeker St. way. And there have not been thought queer at all.

"The Village," says my friend, the mind doctor, "is one great big psychopathic ward, and as such serves its purpose. People who do not fit in with every day, or so called normal existence, get along very well down there, as nearly all the rest of the inhabitants are just a little out of step." He is not, of course, taking into account the many sober, useful citizens who also inhabit the district. There are brokers as well as embryo poets, secretaries as well as light ladies in love, musicians, newspaper reporters who find it the most convenient residential section for Park Row workers and various other prosaic persons who will shed vagrant tears when their living quarters are scrapped in favor of bigger and better factories.

Already, as I have remarked before in these columns, the character of lower Fifth Ave., in the neighborhood of the Brevoort Hotel has changed. Haughty apartment shenanigans replace the four story brown stone fronts. The street now wears an uptown aspect, and only Washington Mews remains "too quaint" in the language of the lady on the sight seeing bus.

Things that worried me when I first struck New York.... The fact that the city lacked a harbor front promenade, a noble esplanade from whose eminence one might view the pakeant of river craft and ocean-bound steamers.... The myriad stray cats that haunted the back fences of the alley-lane street in which I lived.... The eternal presence, along otherwise well-dressed thoroughfares, of the ubiquitous garbages.... The fact that I couldn't find an apartment with a porch or an outlook of any kind. (Later I discovered there were a few. The Robert Peatties had a place down near Washington Square where they had converted a roof garden into an outdoor living room by using an awning and some trees in tubs.)

Things I liked at first about New York: The fact that man and a girl could ride on the subway, the elevated, or the street cars, in evening clothes, without causing any sort of adverse comment. In smaller American cities, it has been my observation that the sight of a pair in formal dress, in any equipage lower than a motor car, is sure to elicit forth sly winks and open jeers. It is quite true that in New York everyone seems to mind his own business. For the same reason, of course, it is called a cold city by people who have been used to the small friendliness, the sugar-borowing and back fence gossiping, of smaller towns. By the same token, the apartment house dweller in Manhattan seems to have a privacy, more freedom of movement and less criticism, than in any other city in the United States.

There are some of the most impudent elevator operators in the world gathered together on Manhattan Island. Some of them are women, in department stores. Others are men, either West Indian boys in uptown apartments or office buildings, or Slavs who wear dapper uniforms of certain Park Ave. temples of commerce. Usually, after an example of sublime insolence, I discover that the operator has this: This operator has been chosen for his courteousness and attention to duty. A fine, ironic touch. There are a few exceptions to the rule, the sons of Erin, who wheel the lifts up and down in the Hotel Vanderbilt. They are fine-looking boys and as polite a lot as you'd meet in a day's walk.

In the tunnel between Grand Central and the Hotel Roosevelt there is a developing and printing service for amateur photographers, which advertises that it will take films at 10 o'clock in the morning and deliver them at 5 o'clock the same afternoon. Seven-hour service in this line is the snappiest I have yet encountered.

WINNING BALL TEAM DINES, FORMS DOWN TOWN COUNTRY CLUB

Members of the Junior Business Men's Club enjoyed a dinner-meeting at the Frances Inn Wednesday night in celebration of the organization's recent accomplishment in winning the 1927 city soft ball championship.

At a re-organization meeting following the dinner, the Junior Business Men's Club passed out of existence and the Downtown Country Club came into being, members voting to change the club's name.

The Xenia organization will be known as the Beta Chapter of the club.

Isadore M. Hyman, one of the founders of the club, was unanimously elected the first "pro" and Willard G. Hult was chosen "steward." The positions are similar to president and secretary-treasurer of other organizations.

The club has twelve charter members but expects to expand by gradually increasing its membership. Present members are John Purdom, Isadore M. Hyman, Willard G. Hult, Carl Highley, Glen Patterson, Robert Finlay, Clark Eckerle, James McCurran, Harold Parrett, George Prugh, Philip Frame and Walter Leopard.

E. E. Boxwell and Paul Turnbull, who served as umpires during the city championship series with the Firemen and during most of the season, were guests of the club at the dinner.

The club plans to hold weekly dinner meetings, and the next meeting will be held at the home of the president, I. M. Hyman, E. Market St., next Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

COUNTRY CLUB GOLF TEAM DEFEATED ON MIDDLETOWN LINKS

Sustaining its first reversal of the year the Xenia Country Club brought a successful season of competition to a close, although losing to the Middletown Community Club at Middletown 28 to 10, Nassau count, in the final inter-city match of the schedule Wednesday afternoon.

Middletown's victory merely evened matters with Xenia for local golfers were victorious in a previous match played earlier in the season here.

Rain spoiled the match during the course of the afternoon and prevented many players from completing their eighteen holes.

Seventeen Xenia players made the trip.

Eber Reynolds turned in the best card of the afternoon, shooting a brilliant seventy-six. He shot both nine-hole rounds in thirty-eight.

The match was played over the old nine-hole course. A new nine-hole links, recently laid out, is available and in use, but was not permitted to be used Wednesday because of the rain.

Players of both clubs enjoyed dinner at the Middletown Y. M. C. A. following the match.

Xenia's record in inter-city matches this season stands at three victories against one defeat. Xenia defeated Wilmington twice and Middletown once, losing only to Middletown Wednesday.

RAIN MARS SPORTSMEN PICNIC BUT 500 ATTEND ANNUAL AFFAIR

Rain interfered with the seventh annual picnic of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association at D. H. Keiter's sugar grove, four and one-half miles south of Xenia, opposite White Chapel Church, and cut the attendance at the outing to about 500 people, Wednesday.

However, the adverse weather did not interfere with the thirty contests arranged, and the events in shot gun, rifle, pistol, revolver shooting, horse shoe pitching and various other sports for men, women and children were held as scheduled.

BELLBROOK MEETS WAYNESVILLE TEAM IN LEAGUE FINALE

Bellbrook will face the league-leading Waynesville nine in its final game in the Triangle League on the Waynesville diamond next Sunday afternoon.

Proceeds of a benefit contest will be given to St. Anthony's of the Waynesville club, who has been unable to work since he was injured by being hit on the head by a pitched ball in a recent game.

After four straight victories, Bellbrook has dropped two league games in a row, losing to the tall-end Jamestown team last Sunday, 6 to 3, in a game replete with good, bad and indifferent baseball. Errors cropped in in every inning. Bellbrook played under a handicap as its regular pitcher and third baseman were absent from the line-up.

COMMISSIONERS DISCUSS PLAN TO ELIMINATE GRADE CROSSING

Elimination of what is considered a dangerous grade crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad on the Jamestown Pike, half a mile east of Xenia, which took a toll of four lives in a tragic accident Sunday, was discussed by County Commissioners, with H. W. Walsh, division highway engineer, Tuesday. Herman Eavey, president of the board, discloses. The matter was taken under advisement.

The grade crossing in question is understood to be included in the crossing elimination program of the state highway department, and State Highway Director G. F. Schlesinger was quoted Tuesday as declaring a meeting would be held soon at Columbus to consider the necessity of abolishing the crossing at this point.

Commissioner Eavey believes it is necessary for the county to make the first move toward this end by petitioning for state aid for the project, in the same manner as state aid is asked on road construction.

It is estimated from information obtained by Mr. Eavey that the expense of eliminating the grade and erecting an overhead bridge at the crossing would be $60,000. Commissioners understand that the legislative appropriation for elimination of designated grade crossings on state highways considered unusually dangerous, was intended to cover the state's share, or 25 per cent of the cost.

Twenty-five per cent of the expense would be cared for by the county and 50 per cent by the railroad company.

Commissioner Eavey also believes the Trebein crossing is also included in the elimination program of the state.

Six persons have been killed and several others injured at the Jamestown Pike crossing in the past two years.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Prospects for an unusually prosperous and enjoyable year at Central High seemed bright with the opening of school Tuesday morning. One of the largest bodies of students ever enrolled at Central answered the bell at 8:30 a. m. The enrollment this year far exceeds the 600 mark.

Annual "convocation" assembly will be held Friday, September 9, in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium. The program for this, the first assembly, has not been announced.

All club activities of last year will be continued, according to Principal Hammerle. The organizations include: a French Club, English Club, Latin Club and Science Club. There will be no agriculture classes this year owing to the fact that the course in this subject has been dropped from the curriculum. The reason for this action was that the few number of students enrolled in the agriculture class did not warrant its continuance.

The French Club, which is under the supervision of Miss Zelda

Carpenter, is already organized for the coming year, its election of officers having taken place at the close of school last spring. William North, senior, will head the club. Byron Cranor, faculty advisor of the Science Club, says that his organization will meet sometime during the second week of school. Miss Haynes, who will be in charge of the Latin Club, has made no definite announcement, although it is certain there will be such a club.

The band and orchestra will resume practice next week, according to E. G. Whitworth, director, who has been in charge of these musical organizations for the past three years. A successful year in this field of work is anticipated.

Organization of the three upper classes will take place next week. The Freshman class in past years has waited until the second semester for its elections, but its plans this year are not definite.

A new type of student government, in the form of an Advisory Council is being inaugurated this year. Membership in this body is to include the various class officers and representatives from the home rooms. Its powers will have to do with matters that directly concern students, and the council is to be called together by the principal.

There is just one right way to keep the skin clear and smooth

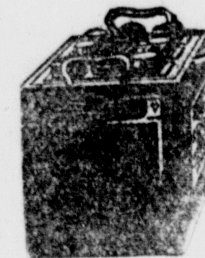

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished. "I suffered from impure blood—I was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. It is time-tried and reliable. S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

ISSUE WARRANT FOR GREEK ALLEGED TO HAVE STOLEN CASH

Steve Clatos, Greek proprietor of the American Shoe Shine Parlor, 10 N. Detroit St., swore out a warrant Tuesday before R. O. Copey, justice of the peace, against Thomas A. Paterakis, Zanesville, O., also a Greek, a prospective purchaser of his business, whom he alleges disappeared Monday with $204, receipts of three days' business.

Paterakis had taken an option on the shoe shining business and the transaction was to be completed Tuesday when Clatos expected to turn over his lease to the Zanesville man, Clatos said.

Paterakis was permitted to take charge of the business last Friday afternoon, prior to taking over the lease, to ascertain Clatos would be a good investment. Clatos remained in the establishment during the daytime but the prospective purchaser opened up each morning and took charge of the day's receipts in the evening.

When Clatos appeared Tuesday morning, Paterakis had disappeared. Magistrate Copey mailed the warrant to the sheriff at Zanesville but has not received a response.

KENTUCKY TRIES TO SOLVE DEATH MYSTERY

PAULINE DEARMOND AND FRED RUSSELL

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Evening Gazette

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Sept. 8.—Western Kentucky has been trying to solve one of the most brutal crimes in its history—the slaying of Fred Russell, 21, and his sweetheart, Pauline Dearmond, 16.

About it all has been a fog of mystery. Was it jealousy or robbery or something else that prompted the crime? Suspects held in the Webster county jail at Dixon have been held for trafficking in liquor. But why should rum runners kill two lovers?

The youth was shot through the head, as he sat in his auto in a fair grounds near Providence. The girl was savagely beaten, her skull being crushed.

Left for dead on a Wednesday night, she was found still alive in a clump of weeds on Sunday morning and was rushed to a hospital in Evansville, Ind. She died that night.

Her Hands Tied.

The girl's hands had been tied behind her back with a piece of cloth.

Russell had married a young woman in Marion, Ind., when he was 19, but had separated a short time later.

Russell had told a story, too, of a huge colored man who had held up the girl and him twice—a man "who laughed fiendishly."

In spite of arrests of several men, the mysterious elements of the case remains unsolved.

"Creatures of the Sea!" echoed the Turtles and the Terrapins, their eyes popping out with surprise. Why cousin, are the salt water folks any different from the fish we meet in the pond and the river? Turtle shook so hard with laughter that the shell upon his broad back creaked.

"Dear me, family of mine, what a lot you have to learn," chuckled he. "The fish that live in these

"I know, for on days when the sea is smooth I have looked down and seen them swaying with the current, now this way, now that, so fluffy and graceful and light that you'd expect them to float away almost any second, torn from their moorings by the tug of the tide."

"But they are strong, too, and there they stay, ever waving to and fro, and so lovely to look upon." "I have been down on the bottom of the sea, too. It is a most delightful place."

"In some spots there is all the mud Turtle could wish for. In it you can sink down and down and down until you think you are never going to stop, and no enemy could find you, even should he look. Then again the bottom of the ocean is as hard as rock and smooth or pebbly, and down there one meets lots of pleasant people that smile and wave as they float by, for it never pays sea folks to stay very long in the depths. It one is wise he comes up for air very often. 'Tis a wonderful place just the same, and I am glad I know about it.'"

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health so Sally does the housework mornings and office work afternoons. BEAT and MILLIE, her brother and sister, give nothing towards keeping up the home.

TED SLOAN is in love with Sally and wants her to marry him. But Sally is interested only in JOHN NYE, for whom Millie works. Nye is infatuated with Millie, who prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON. Davidson worries Sally with his attentions.

During an illness of Millie's, Sally works for John Nye. Later he offers her a steady job, but Sally, hurt by some things that Millie says he said about her, refuses it and goes into the roadside inn business with her aunt Emily Jerome.

The business does not prosper until Aunt Em hires a jazz band and Sally puts on an exhibition "shimmy Black Bottom" dance with Ted for her partner—all this to the horror of Mrs. Jerome, who has brought the whole family to live with Aunt Em, including Beat. Presently Ted confesses that he's ashamed of being a "dancing fool" and Sally sends him packing.

Beat's baby is born, and shortly afterward Beau begins to run around nights. Mabel decides to make him support his own home, and looks around for a job to enable her to buy household furniture. Millie leaves John Nye's employ with the story that he "got fresh" with her, and Sally half believes it. Mabel takes the job. Millie goes to work there, in Davidson's office, and quits that night when Millie has left for Bermuda with her mother and Mr. Jerome, who had returned to his family for a long illness. Davidson drops into the inn. His story of Millie's leaving the office that employed him is that she was angry because of his affection for Sally. He starts making love to Sally to prove his point, and looking up, Sally sees John Nye in the doorway, watching the whole scene.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER LVIII

BEFORE Sally could reach him, John Nye had pulled out a chair and seated himself at one of the little tables against the wall. He was looking at her with a steady gaze. For all the greeting that he gave her as she came hurrying up to him, she might have been Aunt Em's little waitress, Hilda.

And for all the welcome that Sally gave him, he might have been any total stranger dropping in at Aunt Em's inn for chicken and corn fritters and apple pie.

"The regular dinner, please," said John, just glancing at her, frowningly.

Now, Sally was not the sort of person to take off-hand treatment like this "flying down" like the proverbial door mat. She had her pride, and a very high-handed nose-in-the-air sort of pride it was.

"I'll send you a waitress," said she. "You can give her your order." And her red lips came together with a snap that would have done credit to Aunt Em, who took nothing from anybody.

With her chin held high she went slowly across the room and vanished into the kitchen to give Hilda the order for John Nye's dinner.

When she came back into the dining room he had lit a cigarette and was staring moodily out of the window into the soft October dusk as he smoked it.

Sally could not make him out. She could not tell whether he was embarrassed because he had come to Davy making love to her, or whether he was nervous because he had come there, hoping to find Millie and make up his quarrel with her, or whether he was just hungry. Some men were bad-tempered and grumpy when they were hungry, and perhaps John Nye was one of that sort.

But, no; she remembered suddenly that he often had let his lunchtime go by in the days when she had worked for him in his office. He was one of those lean, active, quick-minded men who seldom give a thought to what they are going to eat or when they are going to eat it.

"Maybe I ought to tell him that Millie's on her way to take the boat to Bermuda," she said to herself, and went back to his table.

He looked up sternly. "I hope you didn't come to see Millie, Mr. Nye," she said quietly. "She's not in town. She left this morning to go to—"

"Yes, I had a note from her," he broke in, with a nod of the dark, handsome head that Sally, in spite of herself, always wanted to stroke with her two hands. "She wanted me to forward any letters to her that came to my office. Here are two."

He slipped his hand into his coat pocket and flung two of them down upon the table.

Sally picked them up, and without a word of thanks, went over to the table by the windows where Davidson sat watching her with his gray eyes.

"Sit down," he said shortly, and Sally sat.

It gave her an odd sense of satisfaction to sit here with him in plain sight of John Nye.

"If John thinks that I brought him sandwiches and flowers for his desk because I was crazy about him, this ought to put that notion out of his head," she thought, leaning toward Davidson, without hearing a word that he was saying to her, so deep in thought she was at that instant.

And yet she had been in love with John Nye, during the days when she worked for him. And she was still in love with him. She knew it by the tell-tale beating of her heart, and the queer quiver feeling at the pit of her stomach.

She turned and glanced quickly at him. He had taken a newspaper from his coat pocket and was looking through it.

"What on earth did he come here tonight for?" she asked herself. It was a long time before she found out.

"What's Nye hanging around here for?" Davidson was asking, and his question seemed to be the echo of Sally's thoughts.

"Food, I suppose," she replied quickly. "He knows Millie's not here, so it must be food."

Davidson smiled and looked at her with that caressing look that was like the touch of his hands going over her. "It couldn't be you, could it?" he asked smoothly.

Sally did not even blush. "He hates me!" she declared with conviction. "I went down to work for him one day not so long ago, and walked out before I'd been there 15 minutes. We don't get along—he and I."

"Do you and I? Do we get along?" asked Davidson. "I know one thing

"This is a fine thing to be doing, isn't it?" he asked furiously.

"I could get along forever with you if you wouldn't be such a bristly little thing. Are you like this with all men?"

"Like what?"

"Like you are with me," he went on to explain. "Cold and distant—proud if a man lays a finger on you."

"Sally gave him a blighting look. 'This,' said she, 'is a very silly conversation. Let's talk sense. . . . Did Millie really leave your office because you and she had a quarrel over Ted Sloan and me?'"

"I had a quarrel over you," the man said simply. "I told you that before. Sloan was just to be the fourth person in this little party I framed up. It was you that Millie was sore about."

"She said you tried to kiss her, too," Sally accused him. "I think she was angry because you behaved towards her as you did in the office—where she was likely to get herself talked about, you know."

Davidson gave her a long, steady look.

"Did Millie tell you I made love to her in the office?" he asked roughly. Sally looked down at her hands that were clasping and unclasping themselves on the edge of the little table.

"If she did," Davidson ran on, in his downright heavy way, "she's a liar." His never-mind words. "I've been trying to get Millie Jerome off my neck for months. Ever since the time I met you, as a matter of fact. I always knew some girl would knock me for a row of golf clubs some day, and you're the girl."

Crude as his words were, the ring of truth was in them.

But Sally had had enough of him, truthful or not truthful as he might be. She stood up.

The three musicians were taking their places, and a dozen people had come into the dining room.

"Almost time for me to dance," she said absently.

"Millie never could tell the truth," Davidson seemed to be speaking to himself now, rather than to her. "She was always breaking dates with me—and then lying to square herself. And she liked me, too."

"Oh, I know that!" Sally assured him. "She always said she did." She took a quick look at John Nye as she flashed past him on her way to the hall to get a tambourine that she had bought for the new dance.

At 7:30, when Sally re-entered the dining room for her Savannah Stomp, it was crowded. The sound of talk, the fragrance of tobacco smoke filled the air.

Davidson was still sitting at his table, smoking a thick, black cigar and drinking black coffee.

John Nye was at his table, too. Sally did not look directly at him, but she could see him from the tail of her eye.

She began to dance.

And the Sally whom John Nye never had dreamed of—a wild, abandoned gypsy, whose teeth gleamed in a wide, flashing smile, whose eyes smiled, and whose red heels twinkled madly about the small square of floor in the center of the room.

She was no more like the demure, sensible little girl who had gazed at him timidly brought him sandwiches than a Bird of Paradise is like a Jenny Wren.

If Sally had happened to look his way she would have seen many things clearly written on his face just then—astonishment, a kind of unwilling admiration, and anger, as well as something else.

But she never noticed him. She smiled at the other faces that were turned towards her, and she waved her hand to Davidson, who clapped loudly and long when she was finished.

She danced again, and then the floor was given over to the diners for ballroom dancing.

Sally drifted into the kitchen, light and bright-colored as an autumn leaf in the west wind. Her scarlet silk dress, seen with little bells, tinkled as she went. The door swung shut upon her.

John Nye's eyes stayed upon the panels of the swinging door until it closed. Then he laid a five-dollar bill upon the table and got up.

"Nayer mind the change," he said shortly to the round-eyed gypsy, who stared dully after him. No one had ever given her three dollars for a tip before.

He went into the hall.

Sally was there.

She was on her way upstairs to change her dress, and she started to pass him with just the tiniest smile of recognition.

Then just as she put out her hand to grasp the newel post at the bottom of the flight, she felt her two arms seized firmly from behind and John Nye swung her around facing him.

Fortunately, the big hall was empty. There was no one about to witness the ridiculous scene that followed. It truly was ridiculous—for John Nye shook Sally exactly as a big brother might have shaken a small and wicked sister.

"This is a fine thing for you to be doing, isn't it?" he asked violently,

"You mean dancing here?" she asked, "in my aunt's restaurant? Do you think it's such a terrible thing to do?"

His mouth twisted in a sarcastic smile.

"Oh, well, better women than I have danced for their living," answered Sally, her foot on the bottom step of the stairs. "Dancing is a perfectly respectable thing to do. And I love it. I'm sorry if you dislike to see Millie's sister making a public show of herself, if that's the way you think of it. But you mustn't think any the less of Millie, because I do it. It isn't her fault that I dance here, you know. And Aunt Em and I didn't start out to run a road-house."

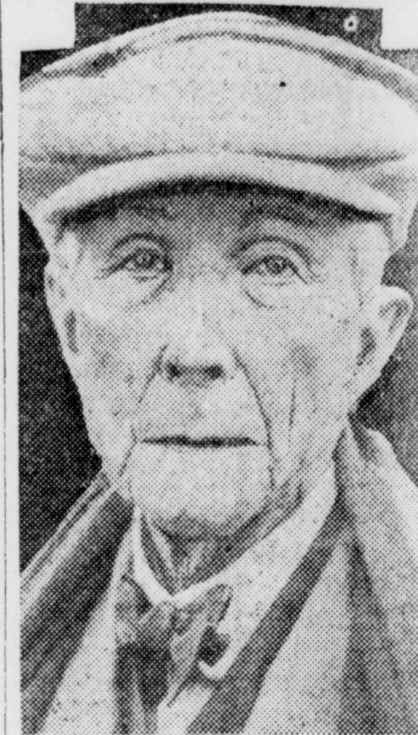

Silence for a minute.

Then John Nye spoke again. "I suppose it isn't any of my business what you do—but what does your Davidson think about it?"

"Davidson came strutting out of the dining room, and without speaking to him, John Nye turned and went out of the house."

The World And All

THE STARS.

There is nothing like a star to give you comfort. There is nothing like a star to help your faith. There is no inspiration quite like the inspiration that may be had in the solemn moods of man, by looking up into the vault of heaven and listening to the silent story of the stars.

It is interesting to note that someone has discovered a new star, so far away that it takes a hundred and forty million years for a ray of light to travel from that star to our eyes. Interesting, if you know what a hundred and forty million years are.

I do not know much about a hundred and forty million years. Large figures fatigue me.

But I have a feeling that many of the stars are very far away, indeed. Looking up, one tries to conceive the idea of the immensity of the distance to this star and to that one. Take your time. Farther than Constantinople. Yes, for light from Constantinople, if strong enough to reach us at all, would reach us almost instantly. You could not say the name of the next president of the United States between the flashing of the light in Constantinople and the catching of the gleam in New York.

From the distant star a flash is sent. Wait a hundred and forty million years and you will see it. And light travels faster than anything else the mind can imagine.

But from the stars one can learn patience. From the stars one may get an inkling of the significance of things about him.

How long have these stars been lighting the infinite space? Since the time of George Washington, whom we revere as a patriot of old? Yes, and Moses looked up at those same stars, and doubtless learned patience in his manifold tribulations. Moses? Back, back, before the earliest leaders of the oldest races of man, there were men and women who, in sorrow and in solitude, in love and in perplexity, looked up at those same stars, considering the changeless constancy of their shining.

And all these went away, and most of them have been forgotten by all the children of men. The troubles and the heartaches that have been soothed by the shining stars have been forgotten, and the bodies of those who labored under the stars have vanished alike from memory.

Well, then, perhaps we and our troubles shall vanish also. Perhaps we and our troubles are not to be taken quite so seriously as we had supposed.

Oh, there is consolation to be had under the stars. And again there is life to be learned. For the stars do not worry about what others think of them, say about them, or legislate for them. They just go right on shining.

SILENCE SHROUDS OLD GLORY FATE

SECOND A. E. F. OFF TO ATTEND LEGION MEETING IN FRANCE

Thousands Sailing From
New York For Paris
Convention

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Yanks are going!... (this time) ... goin' over there." War time memories were revived today as thousands of world war veterans congregated in New York and set sail for France. The waterfront was thronged with them and the piers resounded to the music of bands and backslapping that betokened reunions. It was a somewhat different get-away today from that of ten years ago. There was nothing mysterious or silent about this going, no silent tramping through the streets with overseas packs; no stealing aboard darkened transports in the gray dawn of the morning.

Instead, the A. E. F. is going back to France and it wanted the whole world to know about it. It's going back this time de luxe, in the finest liners afloat, with linen sheets on the beds, and "chow" such as was never seen on the great trek of a decade ago. And there won't be any four hour watches for the black snouts of submarines on this trip.

The same old A. E. F. they are, though. A little thicker about the waist and a little grayer about the temples. But the same old razzing spirit was everywhere apparent. By the time the American Legion convention opens on Sept. 19, there will be some 15,000 of them in Paris and Paris will know it has visitors. The first contingent to leave this morning consisted of 2,400 Pennsylvanians, who sailed on the Cunard liner Tuscania. Most of them were of the 28th and 79th divisions.

Besides the Tuscania and the Antonia, four other great liners were to depart during the day, the Scythia, Caronia, De Grasse and Caladonia. These six vessels alone will carry about 6,000 veterans. Three more liners will sail tomorrow carrying none but legionnaires and their folk, and on Saturday the flagship of the pilgrimage, the Leviathan, sails with headquarters and most of the rank of the A. E. F. among its passengers.

A dozen or so ships, all told, will sail during the next forty-eight hours carrying approximately 12,000 ex-soldiers from New York alone. And others have sailed or are sailing from other ports, from Norfolk to Boston.

A picturesque feature of the Antonia's sailing at 10 o'clock this morning was the presence of twenty-two Oklahoma Indians among the passengers. All were veterans of the A. E. F.

MARSHALL NAMED ON COMMITTEE PICKED TO DEFEND HIS BILL

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8.—Appointment by Governor Vinson today of committees to draft arguments for and against the Marshall bill, designed to provide legal compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace, was announced today. These arguments will be mailed by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown to Ohio voters in connection with the proposal of opponents of the bill to bring about its defeat through a referendum vote at the statewide election next November.

The bill was passed at the last session of the Ohio legislature with a view to remedying the situation due to a U. S. Supreme Court ruling early this year that present Ohio statutes providing compensation for village mayors and justices of the peace are unconstitutional and void.

As members of the committee to prepare argument favoring the Marshall bill, the governor selected Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia, Republican, author of the bill; Senator Alton H. Elting, Orville, Wayne County, Democrat; and Attorney James A. White, Columbus, former superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League.

Donahy appointed as members of the committee to draft argument opposing the Marshall bill C. C. Jones, Columbus, president, Ohio State Automobile Association; M. B. Cain, Columbus, president, Columbus Federation of Labor; Senator George Nils P. Johnson, Youngstown, and Attorney Maxwell E. Wolgamott, Cleveland.

TEMPLARS TO MEET.

AKRON, O., Sept. 8.—Arrangements being made today for the annual Ohio commandery of Knights Templar convention, to be held here October 12 and 13. More than 10,000 delegates are expected to attend, and the convention will be the most elaborate held by the organization since the war.

CANADIAN PLANE IS NOW OVERDUE

SIR JOHN CARLING NOT SIGHTED SINCE LEAVING ON TRANS-OCEAN TRIP

English Become Anxious as Plane Fails to Appear—
No Ships Reported Seeing Flyers—Plane
Had No Radio

CROYDON AIRDRONE, Eng., Sept. 8.—With the Old Glory disaster fresh in mind, anxiety began to rise this afternoon, as the hours slipped by and no word was received regarding the Canadian trans-Atlantic plane Sir John Carling. At 3 o'clock the airdrome officials estimated that the plane was three hours overdue. It should have been sighted off the coast at noon, according to the schedule it was expected to maintain. The airplane carried no wireless.

Officials pointed out that no serious fears should yet be entertained as bad weather might have cut down the plane's speed. A small crowd had gathered here by noon to welcome the plane.

By International News Service
With no radio to tell a waiting world of their progress, Captain Terry Tully and Lieut. James Medcalf were believed far out over the Atlantic this morning, speeding toward London, England, in the monoplane Sir John Carling on an attempted flight from Newfoundland. The fliers, who took off from the airfield of Old Glory's fate, yet fearing the news might shake the confidence with which they started on the hazardous venture, slipped a brief penciled note inside the map case a few moments before the Sir John Carling's take-off, choosing this method of letting the fliers know that still another trans-Atlantic flight had apparently ended in disaster.

Tully and Medcalf hoped to arrive in London before noon today, and boasted before the start that they would take luncheon in the English capital. By 5 o'clock this morning, they should have covered more than three-quarters of the distance across the Atlantic, and if all has gone well, the Sir John Carling should be sighted over the British coast before many hours have passed.

No word has come from any of the steamers which were expected to be in the plane's path, and the absence of a radio apparatus makes it impossible for the fliers to send word of the progress of their flight. However, on the theory that "no news is good news," the plane was believed to be heading steadily toward its goal, with the expanse of ocean between it and land steadily decreasing.

Lighthouses all along the British coast are keeping a sharp lookout for the plane, and London is at a high pitch of excitement. Anticipation of the Sir John Carling's arrival. The Sir John Carling is a Stinson-Detroit monoplane, powered by a Wright whirling motor, and is virtually the same as the Pride of Detroit, the plane in which Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock are attempting a flight around the world. The maximum speed of the plane is 131 miles an hour and its cruising speed 116 miles hourly.

Tully and Medcalf both are fliers of long experience. Both served with distinction with the Canadian Royal Flying Corps, and are now members of the Provisional Flying Corps of Canada. The flight is being made for a $25,000 prize.

The Sir John Carling's route is over the area where the monoplane St. Raphael, with Captain Leslie Hamilton, Lieut. Col. F. F. Minchin of the British Royal Air Force, and the Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim aboard, is believed to have crashed into the sea. The fliers planned to keep a sharp lookout for some trace of the St. Raphael which disappeared after it left Upton, England, on an attempted flight to Ottawa, Canada.

Two ships were supposed to have been directly in the path of the Sir John Carling during the first 500 miles of its flight across the Atlantic. They were the S. S. Newfoundland and the Furness line Nova Scotia. The Newfoundland arrived at St. John's, N. E., last night, without having sighted the plane. No word has been heard from the Nova Scotia, which is believed to be participating in the search for Old Glory.

Two Jockeys Hurt
In Track Collision
CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Noble Walters and George Hughes, jockeys, were in a critical condition today from injuries sustained during a jam of horses, fighting for the rail position in the sixth race at Washington Park last yesterday.

Walters suffered concussion of the brain and may die, it was said. Four other jockeys were unhurt in the jam but received only minor injuries.

Pommard, favored to win, broke a leg. Five thousand spectators who witnessed the tragic pile-up, saw the valuable thoroughbred shot to death as a means of ending its suffering.

Fifteen Sixty, Jockey Hughes' mount, was knocked down in the collision of horses and dragged from the track dead.

BRITISH UNIONS BREAK WITH SOVIET

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 8.—By an overwhelming vote, the British trade union congress today confirmed the general councils decision to break off all trade union negotiations with Soviet Russia. Those supporting the confirmation represented 2,551,000 workers; opponents represented 620,000 workers. The council's decision said that "no useful purpose can be served by negotiating with the all-Russian councils of trade unions so long as the British government maintains its present attitude towards the Soviets."

THREE DEAD IN CHICAGO BLAST

OCEAN APPARENTLY SWALLOWS PLANE

THREE KILLED, FIFTEEN MAY DIE RESULT OF INTERURBAN CRASH

EVANSVILLE, IND., Sept. 8.—A check today on the disaster that befell patrons of the Dade Park race track near here late yesterday revealed that fifteen of the forty-six were in a serious condition and may die. Three persons were killed outright. The tragedy occurred when a crowded interurban car, returning to Evansville after the races, ran into an open switch and crashed head-on into three box cars loaded with brick. Those killed instantly were: Chester Brown, motorman of the interurban car; William Tilley, a farmer; Max Myers, of Evansville. The car, with every seat taken and aisles jammed to capacity, was speeding at forty-five miles an hour, when it hit the open siding. Only four of the passengers escaped unhurt, and of the injured, only three were able to go to their homes after first aid had been administered. All others were rushed to hospitals for treatment. Coroner Max Lowe today began his probe of the tragedy.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID WHEELER AT COLUMBUS FUNERAL RITES

Dry Leaders Assist In Last Exercises For Anti-Saloon League Dictator—Governor Donahy Attends Service.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 8.—Final tribute to his valiant fight in behalf of the prohibition cause was to be paid here today to Wayne B. Wheeler, whose body will be laid to final rest late today at Greenlawn Cemetery. Wheeler's body lay in state at Central Methodist church for several hours, while dozens of his friends and co-workers, including high officials of the Anti-Saloon League, in whose service he spent the greater part of his lifetime; the World League Against Alcoholism, and other temperance organizations, gathered for the funeral ceremony, scheduled for 2 p. m.

Rev. A. G. Schatzmann, pastor of the church, was to deliver the funeral oration, and tributes also were to be paid by Rev. Walter A. Morgan, pastor of First Congregational Church, Chicago; Dr. Francis Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league; Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism; and Dr. Howard Hyde Russell, of the Anti-Saloon League.

A musical service at the graveside was to be rendered by the Columbus Republican Glee Club. Governor Donahy, of Ohio, Mayor Thomas of Columbus, ex-Governor Richard Yates of Illinois, Col. Patrick Henry Callahan, of Louisville, and a delegation of ministers from the three Methodist conferences in Ohio, now in joint session, were to attend the ceremonies. Wheeler's body will be buried at the side of that of his wife, who met death a month ago in a tragic accident at their summer home in Michigan.

CONVICTED MAN KILLED IN LEAP

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 8.—Clarence Hill, 29, is dead here today, from injuries sustained Wednesday when he jumped from the third floor of the courthouse after receiving a ten-year sentence for robbery. Judge Ritchie, who sentenced Hill, declared the act was committed before he had the opportunity of suspending the sentence.

Hill had pleaded guilty of robbing Theodore Fisch of $17, though he maintained he did not commit the crime.

He is survived by his widow and two small children.

SCHLEE AND BROCK LEAVE FOR BANGKOK

RANGOON, Burma, Sept. 8.—The Pride of Detroit, bearing Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock on a record-breaking airplane flight around the world, hopped off at 6 o'clock this morning for Bangkok, Siam.

Bangkok is 375 miles from Rangoon. Because of the comparatively short distance to Bangkok, Schlee and Brock said before leaving here that they might continue straight on to Hanoi, French Indo-China, if weather conditions were such they could safely fly on without making the expected stop.

Hanoi is 625 miles from Bangkok. More than 100 charges have been brought against the president of the school for faculty and alumni, who say he is too dictatorial and ask that he be dismissed. Dr. Anderson has thus far refused to comment on the situation, though intimating that he will make a statement after the trustees have given out their decision. Many witnesses were questioned yesterday and John Clifton, state director of education, was present for part of the hearing. Considerable criticism has been directed against the trustees because of their refusal to make the investigation public.

ROME FLIGHT PLANE UNHEARD FROM SINCE FRANTIC HELP CALL

Two Liners Abandon Search Unable To Find Trace
Of Monoplane Or Crew; Hope Still Held
Out For Aviators

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The mysterious silence of the sea today shrouded the fate of the Fokker monoplane Old Glory, which is feared to have crashed into the Atlantic Ocean 500 miles east of Newfoundland. No further word was heard, but it is believed possible that the radio antennae was damaged by contact with the water, then snapped, making it impossible for the fliers to send further word. Propponents of this theory believe that Old Glory proceeded on its trip, perhaps too high to be sighted by other vessels, and may be seen over the French coast some time today.

Shortly after 10 p. m. today, five hundred miles east of Newfoundland, the Carmania radioed as follows: "2220 (10:20 p. m.) G. M. T. latitude 49.15 north; 49.25 west, now nightfall and quite dark. Regret search for missing plane without results. Weather conditions fresh westerly winds, quite squally and rough breaking seas. Proceeding in great circle to Cape Race and then New York."

In spite of the futile search of the seas for the missing plane, there were many who still believed today that Bertaud, Hill and Payne are safe. And that the passage of a few hours may bring word that the daring venture has not ended so tragically as present reports indicate.

A number of explanations are offered for the belief that the fliers may still be alive. First, it is believed possible that Old Glory met with some temporary trouble, and was forced to swoop down close to the surface of the ocean. As the plane neared the water, according to this belief, the first S. O. S. message was sent out. The trouble which threatened disaster then, perhaps, was repaired, and the airplane again gained altitude, six minutes later sending another message that she was five hundred miles east of Newfoundland. No further word was heard, but it is believed possible that the radio antennae was damaged by contact with the water, then snapped, making it impossible for the fliers to send further word. Propponents of this theory believe that Old Glory proceeded on its trip, perhaps too high to be sighted by other vessels, and may be seen over the French coast some time today.

Secondly, the fact that six minutes elapsed between the two messages from the plane, indicates that the fliers may have had time to inflate their collapsible lifeboat and empty the plane's tanks of their gasoline. The fliers, according to this theory, may now be floating in the lifeboat or in the fuselage of Old Glory, with ration at hand which would keep them alive for thirty days.

But even these optimistic opinions could not veil the general belief and fear that the great transatlantic venture, like so many of its predecessors, had ended in a stark tragedy. The messages from the captains of the Transylvania, and the Carmania, stating that the seas in the area where Old Glory sent out its distress signal were rough, afforded little hope that the three men could survive even if they had been able to float the tiny collapsible rubber lifeboat upon the turbulent waves. Early this morning, with no word of cheer from the ocean liners which swerved from their courses to obey the immutable law of the sea and answer the signal of distress, it appears that Old Glory had met with a tragic end beneath the waters of the Atlantic.

Old Glory's apparent disaster brought to mind the message written on a wreath and stowed in the plane's fuselage to be dropped into the sea in memory of Captains Nungesser and Coli, the French fliers whose attempt to bridge the ocean from France to America ended in tragedy. On the wreath was written:

"Nungesser and Coli: You showed the way. We followed. Bertaud and Payne and Hill."

Today hope that the fliers are still alive was based upon the six minute hiatus that elapsed between the sending of the first S. O. S. and the supplementary message stating that the plane was five hours out of Newfoundland. These six minutes would have permitted the plane to be diverted of its heavy load of gasoline, while an emergency valve may have been opened which would immediately fill the plane's tanks with air. The fliers would have had time to inflate the rubber life raft with compressed air carried in Old Glory's fuselage, and would have permitted the plane to be diverted of its heavy load of gasoline, while an emergency valve may have been opened which would immediately fill the plane's tanks with air. Feel Tired and Languid?
Waste Impurities in the Blood Make One Dull and Listless.

Do you wonder why you feel so drowsy and out of sorts? Too many feel always tired, dull and aching. Too often the cause is sluggish kidneys that permit waste impurities to remain in the blood and cause one to feel dull and listless—to have a nagging headache and annoying headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not working right is often shown by scanty or burning excretions. Assist the kidneys with Doan's Pills. Users everywhere recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

TURNER RULES CONTROL BOARD MUST APPROVE SCHOOL PAYROLL

COLUMBUS, Sept. 8.—Attorney General Edward C. Turner today ruled that the Ohio law requiring submission of payrolls of state departments, boards and commissions to the state controlling board for approval applies only in cases where an appropriation by the state legislature for compensating state employees is for the purpose of paying the salaries of a specified, or fixed, number of employees, whose salaries are not fixed by law.

In an opinion given to Wilbur E. Baker, state finance director and chairman of the state controlling board, Turner held that this law does not apply to the appropriation made by the Ohio legislature to the combined normal and industrial department of Wilberforce University for the salaries of the directors, instructors and other employees hired by the board of trustees of such institution.

State officials pointed out that, in view of this ruling, the action of the board of trustees of the combined schools at Wilberforce, in the matter of such payrolls, will be subject only to such investigation as the state auditor and his examiners may make, in conformity with law.

Dr. Paul D. Espey and his sons, Huch and Frank, are expected to arrive home Friday from Ingleside, Mich., where they have been spending several weeks. Mrs. Espey and little daughter will remain at the resort for a longer stay.

BONDING COMPANY SUES DEVELOPER OF OSBORN TRACT

The Royal Indemnity Company has brought suit in Common Pleas Court against George H. Snyder for $5,500, alleging it was obligated to the extent of a $5,000 bond when Snyder defaulted in a contract with the village of Osborn. The suit is an attachment action to appropriate property of the defendant.

Snyder, the petition asserts, prior to January 2, 1925, owned certain land in Osborn known as the School Place Plat and had it platted into lots and streets designated on the plat.

Upon Snyder's application, the village council accepted the plat as dedicated by Snyder on condition that he furnish $5,000 bond, guaranteeing that the streets would be improved by October 1, 1925, in accordance with plans and specifications then on file, plaintiff declares.

The Royal Indemnity Company on January 9, 1925, contracting to sign the bond for a consideration, which was paid, the petition explains.

The defendant, it is claimed, failed to grade the streets and on November 12, 1926 the Osborn village council notified him at his address, 1205 Exchange Building, Miami, Fla., that his bond was forfeited for failure to fulfill terms of the agreement.

The village instituted court action against Snyder and the bonding company, June 3, 1927 to recover the $5,000, stipulated penalty of the bond and interest, the petition recites.

Plaintiff asserts that in the transaction growing out of litigation, it has been called upon to incur $500 expense in conducting an investigation and in counsel fees.

Snyder, on August 2, 1927, confessed judgment in court, whereby the plaintiff became obligated to description of the second stranger, who roomed at an East End residence from Wednesday to Saturday of last week, and left owing the landlord $1.50 he had borrowed. The room rent was $8.50 but the stranger said this was insufficient and offered to pay $10.50.

The first stranger is described as wearing blue suit and light hat with a dark band.

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of great importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physical and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE. —Adv.

MORE POWER

This is the time of year when thousands of young men and boys are considering very seriously what their school work is going to prepare them for. Many are ready to enter high school or college, or are looking toward another year's work in school, without having made a decision as to their life work.

There is not necessarily anything disastrous for a student in the circumstance that he has not selected his field of labor. Generally speaking, the student in high school ought to be looking ahead to some definite life work in which he takes a keen interest.

If a boy of high school age has a marked liking for mathematics and mechanics, he should be encouraged to look toward a career in engineering.

Much of the great work of the world, particularly in North and South America, is going to be done by the next three or four generations of engineers.

Railroads are not going out of date for another two hundred years, despite the growth of aerial transportation in the immediate future. There will be more railroads to construct, and many tunnels and bridges will be needed to make long routes short and to reduce expensive grades.

But the production and distribution of electric power is the obvious and immediate job ahead of the engineers of the world.

We have only begun to use electricity intelligently and in quantities.

We have only scratched the surface of our power resources.

BENEFIT FROM NATIONAL PARKS

President Coolidge and his party had a most enjoyable week of sight-seeing in the Yellowstone National park, and all who have visited that famous resort will congratulate them on this opportunity. The action of the government in setting aside such wonderful tracts of wild land has been one of the most far-sighted things it ever did.

There is something inspiring and elevating about fine scenery. It helps visitors to forget their little worries and troubles, and they return physically and mentally benefited. It is to be hoped that as time goes on and the nation increases in wealth, the national park system will be greatly extended, so as to include areas of fine natural beauty all over the country, so that all Americans can visit these picturesque locations without long journeys or too great expense.

The Way of the World

TIME ENOUGH

"I haven't time," is the commonest of all excuses. In nine cases out of ten it means: "I haven't the ability or I haven't the interest." As a rule "I haven't time" is a dishonest expression.

GO TO COLLEGE

These are days when many young men and women are still undecided about going to college. There are some who ought not to go to college because they are needed too greatly at home or elsewhere. There are some others who are not fitted for taking on a college education. But in the great majority of cases in which there is doubt, the answer is, GO. College education may or may not equip you to earn more money, but it will give you unimpeachable satisfactions.

MONEY IN EDUCATION

Speaking of the money end of education, it is interesting to note that the average yearly earnings of Princeton students who have been out of college ten years is $7,500. Of those who are interested in income that is worth thinking about.

TAKING THE BLOWS

When Ignatius, old bishop of Antioch, was on his way to Rome to suffer martyrdom, he sent this message to a young man who was his friend:

Any blacksmith can tell you the anvils will wear out hammers. If you can stand like a beaten anvil, nothing can prevail against you.

BETTER THAN PROSPERITY

We all smile happily when some financial expert predicts the United States will have a hundred years of prosperity. That may not be good news over the long run of time. Big men are not produced in soft times. The manufacturer of character demands hardship as one of its chief ingredients.

SOMEBODY SUFFERED

Four hundred years ago Tyndale translated the Bible. Later he was strangled and then burned in Belgium. They thought he was a dangerous man. He was a liberal. Perhaps they called him a radical. That was in 1536. Many of today's prized possessions came to us through the suffering and death of forgotten heroes.

Songs of a Housewife

BY MARJORIE K. RAWLINGS

WORK AND THE WEATHER

I LIKE tasks better if they suit the day—
I work to the weather should adapt itself.
When hours hang heavy and the sky is gray,
I really like to clean a pantry shelf!

When winds are blowing through the shrubs and trees,
Hurrying home the tardy lady-bugs,
And all the world seems flapping in the breeze,
I like to join right in and shake my rugs!

I like to do my mending when the rain
Hushes the world and quiets passing feet.
It's restful, then, to darn a counterpane,
To sit and think, and make my patching neat.

And when white clouds lie idle in the sky,
The hot sun's drowsy and the fat bees shirk,
Passing the hard-to-enter posies by—
It seems plain foolish to do any work!

Household Hints

By Mrs. Mary Morton

MENU HINT
Round steak has a delicious flavor, and if you get a tender piece (the top round) it can be broiled in place of sirloin or porterhouse, making an economical dish. Round steak that is not tender enough to be broiled may be chopped and then broiled or fried. The potatoes in the following menu are baked in the oven, which is also used to sear the tomatoes and broil the meat.

Broiled Round Steak
Baked Potatoes
Scalloped Tomatoes
Cucumber and Onions Sliced with French Dressing
Bread Pudding Tea or Coffee

TODAY'S RECIPES
Scalloped Tomatoes—Twelve medium sized tomatoes sliced, two cups buttered bread crumbs, one teaspoon salt, one-half to one table-spoon sugar, dash of pepper. Cover, bake in moderate oven twenty minutes, uncover, bake twenty minutes longer to brown. If you use cooked tomatoes, thirty minutes altogether is all that is needed for cooking.

Bread Pudding—One pint stale bread crumbs, one quart milk, one cup sugar, three eggs, piece of butter the size of an egg. Mix butter and sugar together, add the yolks of the eggs, put them into the milk and bread and bake half an hour. Beat whites to a stiff froth, add half a cup of powdered sugar. First spread layer of jelly on pudding, then the beaten whites, and return to oven to brown.

Condiment—Sauce, spices, relishes, etc., used to give flavor to foods.

SUGGESTIONS

Dressmaking Hint.
Finish the neck of the frock you are making as soon as possible as it may get stretched out of shape with frequent tryings-on, and then it will be difficult to give it a neat finish.

ICE BOX CAKE
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

The ice box cake may be a comparatively simple dessert or it may be a very rich one. The following recipe is of the latter order. Twenty-four lady fingers, two squares of chocolate, one-half cup granulated sugar, one-fourth cup water, one cup butter, two and one-fourth cups confectioners' sugar, one cup whipped cream, one-half teaspoon milk, four eggs, beaten separately. Line bottom and sides of tin plate with lady fingers, separated, rounded side down, and close together. Cook chocolate, granulated sugar and water in double boiler until melted and smooth. Beat egg yolks, add milk, then add gradually to the chocolate and cook until smooth. Cool. Cream butter and two cups of the confectioners' sugar well. Add egg mixture, stir well. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Pour filling into form of lady fingers, cover with the rest of the fingers. Set in ice box twenty-four hours. Remove to plate. Cover with whipped cream, adding the rest of the confectioners' sugar and vanilla flavoring. A sheet of sponge cake may be used in place of lady fingers.

Most important of all, you must look well-groomed while you are traveling and spending time in hotels. You will be constantly meeting new people, and whether from a personal or a business standpoint, you will want their impression of you to be favorable.

In order to travel light, I advise that you use a face cream that will cleanse, revitalize and give a smooth surface to the skin all at the same time. You will be especially pleased with a cream made by a pasteurized process as it is so definitely beneficial to the skin it cleanses. You should use a skin-toning lotion that will serve at the same time as a foundation. I know of one that is an excellent joy for travel because it can be used as a quick daytime cleanser to remove the stale make-up and put the skin in condition for fresh powder and rouge. Unless your skin is oily, it is my advice that you refrain from washing it during your travels and rely on cream or liquid cleansers in order not to subject it to the constant change in water. Do not place your tender skin at the mercy of hotel and train soaps. You will never regret tucking into your suitcase a small container of a good washing preparation.

THE TROUBLE WITH PARENTS

With the possible exception of the average lover, determined to conceal his true nature, I suppose the worst fourflushers in the world are parents.

We pose as having to erudition, omniscience, an unblemished record of obedience to parents and scholastic achievements. Sooner or later every child may learn the truth about his father and then—bingo!—down goes his idol.

The trouble with parents is their consuming vanity. Marriage itself and family life originally grew out of snobbery. It occurred to the chief of the tribe that since they were better than anybody else, the only way to have fit associates would be to surround themselves with their own flesh and blood.

Hence the beginning of interest in one's own personal children. Today most parents might prefer to have their children a little more disposed to take them seriously. The ideal child would be one that thoroughly subjugates his personal desires and always does exactly as bidden, thus flatteringly accepting his parents' wishes as superior to his own.

He should also from time to time, make plain to his parents, particularly his father: "How perfectly wonderful you are! And how nobly I love you!"

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BEAUTY TIME FOR THE WOMAN WHO TRAVELS.

If you lead the life of a traveler, your beauty problems are legion, and to you especially I want to give helpful advice on how to stand up to your beauty time.

I spoke yesterday of the woman who has plenty of leisure time in her own home for her beauty rites, but your problems are different from hers. She can take her time when she wants it, but you will have to catch your minutes on the fly, put up with varied conditions, and, in addition, combat the deleterious effects of different climates and all kinds of water.

You will be limited in your choice of a beauty kit, for placing preparations and implements on top of a dressing table is vastly different from packing them into suitcases or a wardrobe trunk. You will not want to carry any more than necessary with you. You will not have the advantage of the home woman in being able to make use of "home-brewed" beauty aids.

Most important of all, you must look well-groomed while you are traveling and spending time in hotels. You will be constantly meeting new people, and whether from a personal or a business standpoint, you will want their impression of you to be favorable.

In order to travel light, I advise that you use a face cream that will cleanse, revitalize and give a smooth surface to the skin all at the same time. You will be especially pleased with a cream made by a pasteurized process as it is so definitely beneficial to the skin it cleanses. Do not place your tender skin at the mercy of hotel and train soaps. You will never regret tucking into your suitcase a small container of a good washing preparation.

I hope my advice on beauty time for the traveler will make your trips more enjoyed and successful. In my next talk I am going to discuss the woman in business, who is really the one who "cashes in" on the time she invests in beauty.

Mayor W. F. Brennan has received a letter from Mayor A. R. Turnball, Canton, inviting citizens of Xenia to attend the dedication of the McKinley monument, September 30.

Because an angry baby held its breath until it was almost black in the face, residents of Second St. for several blocks were stirred to an unusual degree of excitement.

ANSWERS TO MOTHERS.

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers.

—Jewish Proverb.

"My sixteen-year-old daughter has been much over weight. When I called her attention to your reducing articles, she decided to try them. Result: She reduced 20 pounds, and is really very much prettier and her poise is much improved. She had to discontinue owing to a cold which she could not seem to break while she was on her reducing diet. She's going to start again. She is so happy in her improved appearance, and has not felt ill or uncomfortable at any time. Your articles came at such an opportune time, just when they were really needed by her, and we are both profoundly grateful."

Not many mothers realize sufficiently that overweight (to the stage of looking fat) in a child, is a serious thing, not only physically but mentally, especially at adolescence. When the mind is very impressionable and slights and unkind comments of friends and unpopularity with the opposite sex make the youngster so unhappy.

While it is desirable for children to be slightly above the average for best health, certainly when they are so much above the average that they are frankly fat, they should reduce. Children as well as adults may be precipitated into diabetes by overweight, and they are also less resistant to certain infections such as pneumonia.

I have demonstrated, myself—and many of the followers have had the same experience—that a child does not clear up while on reducing diet; so my advice always is to go back to maintenance diet during an infection. This disproves entirely the faddists' contention that starvation diets and fasting are remedies for everything.

Physically, it is highly important that the growth foods and the foods necessary for proper functioning are not limited in youth beyond what they should be in the normal. As the increase in height will take care of a certain amount of weight, a reduction of one pound a week may be enough for children.

At least two glasses of whole milk, at least one tablespoonful of butter or cod liver oil, fairly liberal amounts of eggs, cheese or flesh foods, and liberal amounts of vegetables, especially the green leaf vegetables, and fruits, must be taken daily.

We have a list of books on mothers which contain the names of some of the feeding of children. (Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for any material.) Thank you for letting us know of your daughter's good results.

Desire Sterility.
"I desire children very much. My general health is good, my weight is normal, but I have a cyst on the right ovary. May this be the cause in my case? I have been married for eight years."

MRS. M.
There are many causes of sterility, Mrs. M., and it is possible that the cyst you have may be the cause in your case, even though the other ovary might be functioning properly. Among the causes for sterility are unbalanced diet, overweight, tumors or inflammations obstructing the passages, and malpositions and malformations of the organs. In 25 per cent or more of the cases the cause of sterility is on the husband's side, so he should also have an examination.

Some malpositions of the organs may be corrected by proper exercises. The exercises we have outlined in the Atonic Abdominal Wall exercise will help to correct the exercise of walking on the hands and feet (especially good for backward displaced organs). Sometimes, in these wrong positions, the use of a little instrument (pessary) to hold the uterus in place is used. This has to be especially fitted by your doctor. Put yourself in the hands of a competent physician, Mrs. M.

Meanwhile, send for our articles on the Balanced Diet and the Atonic Abdominal Wall. Enclose a large self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Tomorrow: Answers to correspondents.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Already, as I have remarked before in these columns, the character of lower Fifth Ave. in the neighborhood of the Brevoort Hotel has changed. Haughty apartment skyscrapers replace the four storied brown stone fronts. The street now wears an up-town aspect, and only Washington News remains "too quaint" in the language of the lady on the sight seeing bus.

Things that worried me when I first struck New York.... The fact that the city lacked a harbor front

I Have Said in My Heart

BY IDAH MCGLOONE GIBSON.

MOODS.

Two letters have come to me so opposite in their ideas of what constitutes happiness that I am sure that other young women will agree with one or the other of them.

One said she was so tired of being a stenographer that she was going to accept the first proposal of marriage that came to her. "I want someone to take care of me. I want someone to pay the rent. I want someone to buy the food, I want someone to pay the bills."

"He may be old or young, ugly or handsome; indeed he need have only one qualification—he must have money or at least a smashing good salary."

"If such a man comes along, I will gladly go with Mr. Remington and Mr. Underwood without a qualm."

"I want to be one of those young women who can wear silk stockings without worry when they develop 'runs.' I want to order at a restaurant without looking at the menu in bed and above all else, I want to have time and money to visit beauty shops when I please. Almost all writers of advice to girls say money cannot make you happier. Well, I would like some man to prove it to me."

The other letter is from a girl who has been married only six months. Among other things she says: "I have wished a thousand times that I had not married. I was much happier before I married. I am married, I have been a stenographer for four years and had grown very tired of it, and so when one of the copy writers in the advertising department asked me to marry him, I jumped at the chance."

"Like the princess in the fairy tale, I expected to live happily ever after. I don't believe in fairy stories any more. Although my husband is earning a very good salary, he has very extravagant tastes and has always spent all he earned on himself. When we married we took an apartment and furnished it very beautifully on the installment plan. My husband bought a new car in the same convenient manner. When we figured up our monthly payments, it was found that I could not afford anyone to help me in our beautiful new home. I have to do all the work, even the washing. I never have a cent for myself. I have not had a pair of gloves since I have been married. Now that it is coming winter, I do not know where a hat, let alone a gown, is coming from. 'My husband says he has to go out, while I can stay at home. So if only one winter coat can be bought, he will have to have it.'"

"I have learned what marriage is. I know since my marriage, and although I have tried very hard, my husband complains of the monotony of the meals, and honestly, I do not blame him. I feel like I am to blame in some ways, but I wish I was back in my old job. Then I could spend my money as I pleased, and no one found fault with me."

Memo:—Don't jump into matrimony. Being a wife is no cinch.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

quit.

"Now, Mrs. Lee, I may be a little jealous, but I would tell you to win him back I will appreciate your answer."

If she has gone with "SUSIE," different boys, Susie, the chances are she will tire of your friend and drop him after awhile. Then he'll probably come back to you and you can have him back if you want him. And in the meantime, I wouldn't let either the boy or girl know that their goings on interested me in the least. There are doubtless other boys with whom you can be friends. Do you think you can manage that? It never pays to wear one's heart on one's sleeve, you know. Concealing your feelings is one of the permissible forms of deception."

A young man wants to get acquainted with the girl who said she was a dreamer and disgusted with men. He wants to meet her and be her "true blue pal," apparently.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I would like to get acquainted with 'Little Dream Pal,' because I am looking for a girl that doesn't believe in petting parties and flirting. I sure would appreciate such a girl, because, I, too, have been lonesome."

"PAL."

I haven't her name or address, but she may see your letter and appreciate it.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Soon, say the real estate experts, it will be impossible for the impetuous to live in New York's Bohemia, the fabulous Greenwich Village. The name of the place will stick to it, doubtless, more as a geographical designation than as a tempting come-on for sightseers greedy for a glimpse of our Latin Quarter. But since seven million of dollars have been lately spent in making an industrial center of Varick St., a long stretch which serves the Village as a wholam boundary, the Village looms large in real estate estimate, and so it may not be patronized much longer by the poor in purse.

Of course, old times will tell you even now that the Village is not what it was ten or twenty years back, a cradle of the arts and of spontaneous living. They point out that the cafes and speak-easies are mostly filled with manicures, milliners and midwives; that if all the poets are not dead, at least they have moved to Connecticut.

Be that as it may be, this Bohemian center has provided a gaudy refuge for many an uptowner who discovered that his Riverside Drive facade no longer understood him. The passing of the place as such a refuge will be felt, and it is to be expected that the Bohemian center will be a psychological case, who have taken their many phobias down Bleeker St. way. And there have been thought queer at all.

"The Village," says my friend, the mind doctor, "is one great big psychopathic ward, and as such serves its purpose. People who do not fit in with every day, or so called normal existence, get along very well down there, as nearly all the rest of the inhabitants are just a little out of step." He is not, of course, taking into account the many sober, useful citizens who also inhabit the district. There are brokers as well as embryo poets, secretaries as well as light ladies in love, musicians, newspaper reporters who find it the most convenient residential section for Park Row workers, and various other prosaic persons who will shed vagrant tears when their living quarters are scrapped in favor of bigger and better factories.

Already, as I have remarked before in these columns, the character of lower Fifth Ave. in the neighborhood of the Brevoort Hotel has changed. Haughty apartment skyscrapers replace the four storied brown stone fronts. The street now wears an up-town aspect, and only Washington News remains "too quaint" in the language of the lady on the sight seeing bus.

"The Village," says my friend, the mind doctor, "is one great big psychopathic ward, and as such serves its purpose. People who do not fit in with every day, or so called normal existence, get along very well down there, as nearly all the rest of the inhabitants are just a little out of step." He is not, of course, taking into account the many sober, useful citizens who also inhabit the district. There are brokers as well as embryo poets, secretaries as well as light ladies in love, musicians, newspaper reporters who find it the most convenient residential section for Park Row workers, and various other prosaic persons who will shed vagrant tears when their living quarters are scrapped in favor of bigger and better factories.

Already, as I have remarked before in these columns, the character of lower Fifth Ave. in the neighborhood of the Brevoort Hotel has changed. Haughty apartment skyscrapers replace the four storied brown stone fronts. The street now wears an up-town aspect, and only Washington News remains "too quaint" in the language of the lady on the sight seeing bus.

Things that worried me when I first struck New York.... The fact that the city lacked a harbor front

WINNING BALL TEAM DINES, FORMS DOWN TOWN COUNTRY CLUB

Members of the Junior Business Men's Club enjoyed a dinner-meeting at the Frances Inn Wednesday night in celebration of the organization's recent accomplishment in winning the 1927 city soft ball championship.

At a re-organization meeting following the dinner, the Junior Business Men's Club passed out of existence and the Downtown Country Club came into being, members voting to change the club's name.

The Xenia organization will be known as the Beta Chapter of the club.

Isadore M. Hyman, one of the founders of the club, was unanimously elected the first "pro" and Willard G. Hult was chosen "steward." The positions are similar to president and secretary-treasurer of other organizations.

The club has twelve charter members but expects to expand by gradually increasing its membership. Present members are John Purdom, Isadore M. Hyman, Willard G. Hult, Carl Highley, Glen Patterson, Robert Finlay, Clark Eckerle, James McCurran, Harold Parrett, George Prugh, Philip Frame and Walter Leopold.

E. E. Boxwell and Paul Turnbull, who served as umpires during the city championship series with the Firemen and during most of the season, were guests of the club at the dinner.

The club plans to hold weekly dinner meetings, and the next meeting will be held at the home of the president, I. M. Hyman, E. Market St., next Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Arthur Nehf, hero of Giants' world series triumphs and lately with Cincinnati, has signed with Cubs and hopes to help twirl them into a championship.

COUNTRY CLUB GOLF TEAM DEFEATED ON MIDDLETOWN LINKS

Sustaining its first reversal of the year the Xenia Country Club brought a successful season of competition to a close, although losing to the Middletown Community Club at Middletown, 28 to 10, Nassau count, in the final inter-city match of the schedule Wednesday afternoon.

Middletown's victory merely evened matters with Xenia for local golfers were victorious in a previous match played earlier in the season here.

Rain spoiled the match during the course of the afternoon and prevented many players from completing their eighteen holes.

Seventeen Xenia players made the trip.

Eber Reynolds turned in the best card of the afternoon, shooting a brilliant seventy-six. He shot both nine-hole rounds in thirty-eight.

The match was played over the old nine-hole course. A new nine-hole links, recently laid out, is available and in use, but was not permitted to be used Wednesday because of the rain.

Players of both clubs enjoyed dinner at the Middletown Y. M. C. A. following the match.

Xenia's record in inter-city matches this season stands at three victories against one defeat. Xenia defeated Wilmington twice and Middletown once, losing only to Middletown Wednesday.

RAIN MARS SPORTSMEN PICNIC BUT 500 ATTEND ANNUAL AFFAIR

Rain interfered with the seventh annual picnic of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association at D. H. Keiter's sugar grove, four and one-half miles south of Xenia, opposite White Chapel Church, and cut the attendance at the outing to about 500 people, Wednesday.

However, the adverse weather did not interfere with the thirty contests arranged, and the events in shot gun, rifle, pistol, revolver shooting, horse shoe pitching and various other sports for men, women and children were held as scheduled.

BELLBROOK MEETS WAYNESVILLE TEAM IN LEAGUE FINALE

Bellbrook will face the league-leading Waynesville nine in its final game in the Triangle League on the Waynesville diamond next Sunday afternoon.

Proceeds of the benefit contest will be given to Standberry, of the Waynesville club, who has been injured by being hit on the head by a pitched ball in a recent game.

After four straight victories, Bellbrook has dropped two league games in a row, losing to the tail-end Jamestown team last Sunday, 6 to 3, in a game replete with good, bad and indifferent baseball.

Errors cropped out in every inning. Bellbrook played under a handicap as its regular pitcher and third baseman were absent from the lineup.

COMMISSIONERS DISCUSS PLAN TO ELIMINATE GRADE CROSSING

Elimination of what is considered a dangerous grade crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad on the Jamestown Pike, half a mile east of Xenia, which took a toll of four lives in a tragic accident Sunday, was discussed by County Commissioners, with H. W. Walsh, division highway engineer, Tuesday. Herman Eavey, president of the board, discloses. The matter was taken under advisement.

The grade crossing in question is understood to be included in the crossing elimination program of the state highway department, and State Highway Director G. F. Schlesinger was quoted Tuesday as declaring a meeting would be held soon at Columbus to consider the necessity of abolishing the crossing at this point.

Commissioner Eavey believes it is necessary for the county to make the first move toward this end by petitioning for state aid for the project, in the same manner as state aid is asked on road construction.

It is estimated from information obtained by Mr. Eavey that the expense of eliminating the grade and erecting an overhead bridge at the crossing would be $60,000. Commissioners understand that the legislative appropriation for elimination of designated grade crossings on state highways considered unusually dangerous, was intended to cover the state's share, or 25 per cent of the cost.

Twenty-five per cent of the expense would be cared for by the county and 50 per cent by the railroad company.

Commissioner Eavey also believes the Trebein crossing is also included in the elimination program of the state.

Six persons have been killed and several others injured at the Jamestown Pike crossing in the past two years.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Prospects for an unusually prosperous and enjoyable year at Central High seemed bright with the opening of school Tuesday morning. One of the largest bodies of students ever enrolled at Central answered the bell at 8:30 a. m. The enrollment this year far exceeds the 600 mark.

Annual "convocation" assembly will be held Friday, September 9 in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium. The program for this, the first assembly, has not been announced.

All club activities of last year will be continued, according to Principal Hammerle. The organizations include: a French Club, English Club, Latin Club and Science Club. There will be no agriculture classes this year owing to the fact that the course in this subject has been dropped from the curriculum. The reason for this action was that the few number of students enrolled in the agriculture class did not warrant its continuance.

The French Club, which is under the supervision of Miss Zelda

Carpenter, is already organized for the coming year, its election of officers having taken place at the close of school last spring. William North, senior, will head the club. Byron Cramer, faculty advisor of the Science Club, says that his organization will meet sometime during the second week of school. Miss Haynes, who will be in charge of the Latin Club, has made no definite announcement, although it is certain there will be such a club.

The band and orchestra will resume practice next week, according to E. G. Whitworth, director, who has been in charge of these musical organizations for the past three years. A successful year in this field of work is anticipated.

Organization of the three upper classes will take place next week. The Freshman class in past years has waited until the second semester for its elections, but its plans this year are not definite.

A new type of student government, in the form of an Advisory Council, is being inaugurated this year. Membership in this body is to include the various class officers and representatives from the home rooms. Its powers will have to do with matters that directly concern students, and the council is to be called together by the principal.

There is just one right way to keep the skin clear and smooth

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

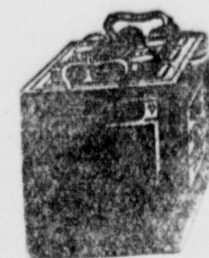

You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished.

"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight. I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. It is time-tried and reliable.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

The Theater

Through the efforts of Joseph M. Schenck, guiding head of United Artists, Max Reinhardt, Europe's most eminent exponent of the spoken drama, has finally surrendered to the call of Hollywood and motion pictures.

Mr. Schenck has signed a contract with Reinhardt to direct one picture for United Artists to be produced during the coming winter. Mr. Reinhardt will arrive in America some time before December and will probably remain in Hollywood for six months.

Max Reinhardt is recognized by the entire world as the greatest living master of stagecraft. His production of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" has brought him international fame and his presentation has been revived year after year. "Orpheus in the Underworld" by Offenbach, "Sumurun," "Oedipus Rex," "Euryanthe" and "The Prisoner" are other of his best known productions. Reinhardt has produced plays by Strindberg, Wedekind and Ibsen in Germany, England, France and all the Scandinavian countries. The moving picture world will await with the greatest interest the first Reinhardt production for the films.

"It will be a modern romance."

Rosetta Duncan, now in a successful prologue appearance with her sister Vivian in New York, where their first United Artists picture "Topsy and Eva" is making a sensational run, has turned once more to black-face. The dark make-up, a Duncan institution since Rosetta first amused her audience ten years ago, was resumed on receipt of a flood of fan letters requesting her to do so. On completion of their New York schedule the famous sisters will make an extended personal appearance in Chicago.

"It will be a modern romance."

ISSUE WARRANT FOR GREEK ALLEGED TO HAVE STOLEN CASH

Steve Clatos, Greek proprietor of the American Shoe Shine Parlor, 10 N. Detroit St., swore out a warrant Tuesday before R. O. Copey, justice of the peace, against Thomas A. Paterakis, Zanesville, O., also a Greek, a prospective purchaser of his business, whom he alleges disappeared Monday with $204, receipts of three days' business.

Paterakis had taken an option on the shoe shining business and the transaction was to be completed Tuesday when Clatos expected to turn over his lease to the Zanesville man, Clatos said.

Paterakis was permitted to take charge of the business last Friday afternoon, prior to taking over the lease, to ascertain whether it would be a good investment. Clatos remained in the establishment during the day, but the prospective purchaser opened up each morning and took charge of the day's receipts in the evening.

When Clatos appeared Tuesday morning, Paterakis had disappeared. Magistrate Copey mailed the warrant to the sheriff at Zanesville but has not received a response.

KENTUCKY TRIES TO SOLVE DEATH MYSTERY

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Evening Gazette

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Sept. 8.—Western Kentucky has been trying to solve one of the most brutal crimes in its history—the slaying of Fred Russell, 21, and his sweetheart, Pauline Deamond, 16.

About it all has been a fog of mystery. Was it jealousy or robbery or something else that prompted the crime? Suspects held in the Webster county jail at Dixon have been held for trafficking in liquor. But why should rum runners kill two lovers?

The youth was shot through the head, as he sat in his auto in a fair grounds near Providence. The girl was savagely beaten, her skull being crushed.

Left for dead on a Wednesday midnight, she was found still alive in a clump of weeds on Sunday morning and was rushed to a hospital in Evansville, Ind. She died that night.

Her Hands Tied.

The girl's hands had been tied behind her back with a piece of cloth.

Russell had married a young woman in Marion, Ill. when he was 19, but had separated a short time later.

Russell had told a story, too, of a huge colored man who had held up the girl and him twice—a man "who laughed friendly."

In spite of arrests of several men, the mysterious elements of the case remains unsolved.

SOCIETY MEETS.

Nearly thirty ladies of the Presbyterian Church were present at the meeting of the Missionary Society which was held at the home of Miss Mattie Williams last Friday.

The program was of unusual interest. Mrs. J. P. White of Xenia gave an address. Mrs. White is editor of the Missionary Magazine, this year marking the fortieth anniversary of its founding. Seven ladies gave an entertaining playlet, "Why the Missionary Society Failed," and Miss Alice Belle Clark sang a solo.

ENTERTAINS TOWN

About one hundred and fifty friends were invited to the home of Marshall Al Zeller last Friday evening and were entertained on the beautiful lawn which was decorated and lighted for the occasion. The host is a fine cook and had prepared barbecued veal sandwiches, and these were served with coffee. A splendid fire made it possible for all who chose, to toast wafers and marshmallows. Some of the guests enjoyed dancing on the cement walks and porch.

Mr. Zeller's daughters, Miss Mary who is spending a short vacation before going to Columbia University, and Mrs. Robert Harbourn of Dayton, assisted their father in his entertaining. Guests were present from Dayton, Xenia and Springfield.

The Rev. E. A. McGinty, who has been for six years pastor at St. Augustine Church, has been transferred to Cincinnati, where he will act as chaplain at Good Samaritan Hospital.

The Mystic Club will have a picnic supper in Anderson's grove Thursday evening.

The Sunday School class of the M. E. S. B. taught by Mrs. L. D. Vesey, enjoyed a class meeting with picnic supper at the home of Miss Mary Ellen Mossman, Friday evening.

R. D. Bryan, Thurman Stevens, Marcus Bogart, Raper Turner and Marcus Turner drove to Kenton to attend the dog races, held there on Labor Day.

Miss Mildred Gates of Franklin spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. James Alden.

"Creatures of the Sea!" echoed the Turtles and the Terrapins, their eyes popping out with surprise. Why, cousin, are the salt water folks any different from the fish we meet in the pond and the river?" Turtle shook so hard with laughter that the shell upon his broad back creaked.

"Dear, me, family of mine, what a lot you have to learn!" chuckled he. "The fish that live in these

"I know, for on days when the sea is smooth I have looked down and seen them swaying with the current, now this way, now that, so fluffy and graceful and light that you'd expect them to float away almost any second, torn from their moorings by the tug of the tide."

"But they are strong, too, and there they stay, ever waving to and fro, and so lovely to look upon." "I have been down on the bottom of the sea, too. It is a most delightful place."

"In some spots there is all the mud Turtle could wish for. In it you can sink down and down and down until you think you are never going to stop, and no enemy could find you, even should he look. Then again the bottom of the ocean is as hard as rock and smooth or pebbly, and down there one meets lots of pleasant people that smile and wave as they float by, for it never pays sea folks to stay very long in the depths. If one is wise he comes up for air very often. 'Tis a wonderful place just the same, and I am glad I know about it."

"Tell us about them! Tell us about them!" cried the Turtles and the Terrapins, and the Tortoises, and the traveler, nothing loth, began.

"I'll bet you a wriggly tadpole you don't know that there are flowers growing in the water!" "Flowers in the water!" gasped Grandmother Turtle. "Goodness only knows how old I am and I have never heard that before. I always thought flowers grew on

HER MAN "HONEY LOU" THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL, ETC.

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of

READ THIS FIRST:

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. Mrs. JEROME enjoys her health so Sally does the housework, mornings and afternoons. BEAU and MILLIE, her brother and sister, give nothing towards keeping up the home.

TED SLOAN is in love with Sally and wants her to marry him. But Sally is interested only in JOHN NYE, for whom Millie works. Nye is infatuated with Millie, who prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON. Davidson worries Sally with his attentions.

During an illness of Millie's, Sally works for John Nye. Later he offers her a steady job, but Sally, hurt by some things that Millie says he said about her, refuses it and goes into the roadside inn business with her AUNT EMILY JEROME.

The business does not prosper until Aunt Em hires a jazz band and Sally puts on an exhibition "showing Black Bottom" dance with Ted for her partner—all this to the horror of Mrs. Jerome, who has brought the whole family to live with Aunt Em, including Beau's wife, MABEL. Presently Ted confesses that he's ashamed of being a "dancing fool" and Sally sends him packing.

Beau's baby is born, and shortly afterward Beau begins to run around nights. Mabel decides to make him support his own home, and looks around for a job to enable her to buy household furniture. Millie leaves John Nye's employ with the story that he "got fresh" with her, and Sally half believes it. Mabel takes the job. Millie goes to work then, in Davidson's office, and quits that place with the same story about Davidson. One night when Millie has left for Bermuda with her mother and Mr. Jerome, who had returned home for a long illness, Davidson drops into the inn. His story of Millie's leaving the office that employed him is that she was angry because of his affection for Sally. He starts making love to Sally to prove his point, and looking up, Sally sees Nye in the doorway, watching the whole scene.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER LVIII

BEFORE Sally could reach him, John Nye had pulled out a chair and seated himself at one of the little tables against the wall.

For all the greeting that he gave her as she came hurrying up to him, she might have been Aunt Em's little waitress, Hilda.

And for all the welcome that Sally gave him, he might have been any total stranger dropping in at Aunt Em's inn for chicken and corn fritters and apple pie.

"The regular dinner, please," said John, just glancing at her, frowningly.

Now, Sally was not the sort of person to take off-hand treatment like this "lying down" like the proverbial door mat. She had her pride, and a very high-handed nose-in-the-air sort of pride it was.

"I'll send you a waitress," said she. "You can give her your order." And her red lips came together with a snap that would have done credit to Aunt Em, who took nothing from anybody.

With her chin held high she went slowly across the room and vanished into the kitchen to give Hilda the order for John Nye's dinner.

When she came back into the dining room he had lit a cigarette and was looking moodily out of the window at the soft October dusk as he smoked it.

Sally could not make him out. She could not tell whether he was embarrassed because he had come upon Davy making love to her, or whether he was nervous because he had come there, hoping to find Millie and make up his quarrel with her, or whether he was just hungry. Some men were bad-tempered and grumpy when they were hungry, and perhaps John Nye was one of that sort.

But, no; she remembered suddenly that he often had let his lunchtime go by in the days when she had worked for him in his office. He was one of those lean, active, quick-minded men who seldom give a thought to what they are going to eat or when they are going to eat it.

"Maybe I ought to tell him that Millie's on her way to take the boat to Bermuda," she said to herself, and went back to his table.

He looked up sternly. "I hope you didn't come to see Millie, Mr. Nye," she said quietly. "She's not in town. She left this morning to go to—"

"Yes, I had a note from her," he broke in, with a nod of the dark, handsome head that Sally, in spite of herself, always wanted to stroke with her two hands, whenever she looked at him. "She wanted me to forward any letters to her that came to my office. Here are two."

He slipped his hand into his coat pocket and fished two of them down upon the table.

Sally picked them up, and without a word of thanks, went over to the table by the windows where Davidson sat watching her with his gray eyes.

"Sit down," he said shortly, and Sally sat.

It gave her an odd sense of satisfaction to sit here with him in plain sight of John Nye.

"If John thinks that I brought him sandwiches and flowers for his desk because I was crazy about him, this ought to put that notion out of his head," she thought, leaning toward Davidson, without hearing a word that he was saying to her, so deep in thought she was at that instant.

And yet she had been in love with John Nye, during the days when she worked for him. And she was still, she knew it by the tell-tale beating of her heart, and the queer quiver feeling at the pit of her stomach.

She turned and glanced quickly at him. He had taken a newspaper from his coat pocket and was looking through it.

"What on earth did he come here tonight for?" she asked herself. It was a long time before she found out.

"What's Nye hanging around here for?" Davidson was asking, and his question seemed to be the echo of Sally's thoughts.

"Food, I suppose," she replied quickly. "He knows Millie's not here, so it must be food."

Davidson smiled and looked at her with that caressing look that was like the touch of his hands going over her. "It couldn't be you, could it?" he asked smoothly.

Sally did not even blush. "He hates me!" she declared with conviction. "I went down to work for him one day not so long ago, and walked out before I'd been there 15 minutes. We don't get along—he and I."

"This is a fine thing to be doing, isn't it?" he asked furiously.

"I could get along forever with you if you wouldn't be such a bristly little thing. Are you like this with all men?"

"Like what?"

"Like you are with me," he went on to explain. "Cold and distant—peevish if a man lays a finger on you."

Sally gave him a blighting look. "This said man," I tell you that before Sloan was just to be the fourth person in this little party I framed up. It was you that Millie was sore about."

"We had a quarrel over you," the man said simply. "I tell you that before Sloan was just to be the fourth person in this little party I framed up. It was you that Millie was sore about."

"She said you tried to kiss her, too," Sally accused him. "I think she was angry because you behaved towards her as you did in the office—where she was likely to get herself talked about, you know."

Davidson gave her a long, steady look.

"Did Millie tell you I made love to her in the office?" he asked roughly.

Sally looked down at her hands that were clasping and unclasping themselves on the edge of the little table.

"If she did," Davidson ran on, in his downright heavy way, "she's a liar." He never minced words. "I've been trying to get Millie Jerome off my neck for months. Ever since the time I met you, as a matter of fact. I always knew some girl would knock me for a row of golf clubs some day, and you're the girl."

Crude as his words were, the ring of truth was in them.

But Sally had had enough of him, truthful or not, truthful as he might be. She stood up.

The three musicians were taking their places, and a dozen people had come into the dining room.

"Almost time for me to dance," she said absently.

"Millie never could tell the truth," Davidson seemed to be speaking to himself now, rather than to her. "She was always breaking dates with me—and then lying to square herself. And she liked me, too."

"Oh, I know that!" Sally assured him. "She always said she did." She took a quick look at John Nye as she flashed past him on her way to the hall to get a tambourine that she had bought for the new dance.

At 7:30, when Sally re-entered the dining room for her Savannah Stomp, it was crowded. The sound of talk, the fragrance of tobacco smoke filled the air.

Davidson was still sitting at his table, smoking a thick, black cigar and drinking black coffee.

John Nye was at his table, too. Sally did not look directly at him, but she could see him from the tail of her eye.

She began to dance.

And the Sally who danced was a Sally whom John Nye never had dreamed of—a wild, abandoned gypsy, whose teeth gleamed in a wide, flashing smile, whose eyes smiled, and whose red heels twinkled madly about the small square of floor in the center of the room.

She was no more like the demure, sensible little private secretary who had timidly brought him sandwiches than a Bird of Paradise is like a Jenny Wren.

If Sally had happened to look his way she would have seen many things clearly written on his face just then. Astonishment, a kind of unwilling admiration, and anger, as well as something else.

But she never noticed him. She smiled at the other faces that were turned towards her, and she waved her hand to Davidson, who clapped loudly and long when she was finished.

She danced again, and then the floor was given over to the diners for ballroom dancing.

Sally drifted into the kitchen, light and bright-colored as an autumn leaf in the west wind. Her scarlet silk rags, sewn with little bells, tinkled as she went. The door swung shut upon her.

John Nye's eyes stayed upon the panels of the swinging door until it closed. Then he laid a five-dollar bill upon the table and got up.

"Never mind the change," he said shortly to the round-eyed Hilda, who stared dully after him. No one had ever given her three dollars for a tip before.

He went into the hall. Sally was there.

She was on her way upstairs to change her dress, and she started to pass him with just the tiniest smile of recognition.

"You mean dancing here?" she asked, "in my aunt's restaurant? Do you think it's such a terrible thing to do?"

His mouth twisted in a sarcastic smile. "Oh, well, better women than I have danced for their living," answered Sally, her foot on the bottom step of the stairs. "Dancing is a perfectly respectable thing to do. And I love it. I'm sorry if you dislike to see Millie's sister making a public show of herself, if that's the way you think of it. But you mustn't think any the less of Millie, because I do it. It isn't her fault that I dance here, you know. And Aunt Em and I didn't start out to run a road-house."

Silence for a minute.

Then John Nye spoke again. "I suppose it isn't any of my business what you do—but what does your Davidson think about it?"

"Davidson came strutting out of the dining room, and without speaking to him, John Nye turned and went out of the house."

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THE STARS.

There is nothing like a star to give you comfort. There is nothing like a star to help you fall asleep. There is no inspiration quite like the inspiration that may be had in the solemn moods of man, by looking up into the vault of heaven and listening to the silent story of the stars.

It is interesting to note that someone has discovered a new star, so far away that it takes a hundred and forty million years for a ray of light to travel from that star to our eyes. Interesting, if you know what a hundred and forty million years are.

I do not know much about a hundred and forty million years. Large figures fatigue me.

But I have a feeling that many of the stars are very far away, indeed. Looking up, one tries to conceive the idea of the immensity of the distance to this star and to that one. Take your time. Farther than Constantinople. Yes, for light from Constantinople, if strong enough to reach us at all, would reach us almost instantly. You could not say the name of the next president of the United States between the flashing of the light in Constantinople and the catching of the gleam in New York.

From the distant star a flash is sent. Wait a hundred and forty million years and you will see it. And light travels faster than anything else the mind can imagine.

But from the stars one can learn patience. From the stars one may get an inkling of the significance of things about him.

How long have these stars been lighting the infinite spaces? Since the time of George Washington, whom we revere as a patriot of old? Yes, and Moses looked up at those same stars, and doubtless learned patience in his manifold tribulations. Moses? Back, back, before the earliest leaders of the oldest races of man, there were men and women who, in sorrow and in solitude, in love and in perplexity, looked up at those same stars, considering the changeless constancy of their shining.

And all these went away, and most of them have been forgotten by all the children of men. The troubles and the heartaches that have been soothed by the shining stars have been forgotten, and the bodies of those who labored under the stars have vanished alike from memory.

Well, then, perhaps we and our troubles shall vanish also. Perhaps we and our troubles are not to be taken quite so seriously as we had supposed.

Oh, there is consolation to be had under the stars. And again there is life to be learned. For the stars do not worry about what others think of them, say about them, or legislate for them. They just go right on shining.
